Court Reform Amendments To Be Given Senate Today

Would Retire Jurists at 75, Limit Tribunal to 11 Members.

Approval Forecast By Wheeler, Burke

Measures Provide for Shifts by Change in Constitution.

By Russell Smith

The Senate will receive from its Judiciary Committee today a program for court reform through constitutional amendment, around which opponents of revision by legislation can rally, it appeared last night.

The program is in the form of two proposed amendments to the Constitution. One, the Burke bill, proposes submission of an amendment requiring retirement of Federal judges at 75. The other, the Andrews bill, would offer to the people an amendment fixing membership of the Supreme Court permanently at eleven.

The two leaders of the court bill opposition joined last night in predicting to The Post favorable action will be taken today by the Judiciary Committee on these two amendments. They are Senators Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, and Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, both Democrats.

They coincided likewise in the declaration that the opposition has 44 "positive" commitments against the pending Logan substitute court bill. Wheeler added that he believes the Administration has but 51 votes for the Logan bill, even counting virtually every doubtful Senator as favorable.

Denies Bill Is Compromise.

Thus it appeared for the first time that the Administration has reason to fear outright defeat on the Logan bill, rather than a mere filibuster by the opposition to prevent a vote on that bill.

"The Logan substitute," Wheeler said last night, "is not a compromise at all.

"It is true a great many Senators, for obvious reasons, lean toward a real compromise. They thought at first they had it when this bill was proposed.

"Now they know better, since the bill has been explained and its object shown to be simply another attack on the court. Look at how the Administration's claims have dwindled. First they said they had 64. Then they claimed 60. Now they are not sure what they have.

To this, Burke added that the 44 commitments cover any increase in the court.

"I do not mean that these 44 Senators are against court changes by constitutional amendment," he went on, "but there are that many definitely against any increase in the Supreme Court by legislation. And there probably will be more. We are hoping for addition of from three to six Senators who are now uncommitted."

Consider Amendments Today.

Concerning action of the Judiciary Committee today, Burke said:

"I think that the committee will act on two amendments today. I will make every effort to obtain favorable action on a third, but I do not have a great deal of hope of success."

The two first are his own proposed amendment and that of Senator Andrews (Democrat), of Florida, the former for compulsory retirement and latter for an 11-judge court. The third, also sponsored by Burke, would fix the Supreme Court membership at nine.

Burke pointed out that his amendment for compulsory retirement of justices at 75 would not apply to present members of the court, but only to future appointees and that the Andrews amendment would call for appointment of a justice from each of the ten judicial circuits of the United States. The eleventh justice would be the Chief Justice.

"I myself do not favor the Andrews resolution for an amendment," Burke said, "and expect to vote against it if it is brought to a vote on the floor.

"However, I will vote to report

President's Mother Is Guest in Italy

Florence, Italy, July 11 (U.P.).—Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, mother of President Roosevelt, tonight arrived at the villa of Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the board of U. S. Steel Corporation, for a week's visit.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who arrived at Naples yesterday with the President's son, John, aboard the Conte di Savoia, motored to the Taylor villa at San Domenico di Fiesole, near here, with Taylor and Maj. Henry Hooker.

Woman Dies in Leap.

St. Louis, July 11 (A.P.).—Mrs. Robert C. Duncan, 48, plunged to her death today from the 120-foot high center span of the new Daniel Boone Bridge across the Missouri River near here. Dr. John C. O'Connell, St. Lous County coroner, said Mrs. Duncan had been suffering from a nervous disoder.

George Gershwin Dies From Tumor of Brain

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, July 11.—George Gershwin, 38, noted composer of modern music, died at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital at 10:35 a. m. today after an operation for a brain tumor.

Gershwin, composer of the classic in jazz, "Rhapsody in Blue," which he preferred to call an evolution of modern music, came here only two weeks ago from New York to write the music for a motion picture. He collapsed at a studio and was taken to a hospital.

Physicians believed he had suffered a nervous breakdown. After several days of observation he was released from the hospital, but yesterday he lapsed into a coma, was taken back to the hospital and an X-ray examination disclosed the brain tumor.

Dr. Gabriel Seagall, in charge of his case, telephoned for Dr. Walter Dandy, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, for consultation, but Gershwin's case became so critical late last night that Dr. Seagall and three other surgeons decided to operate.

Dr. Carl Rand performed the operation.

Gershwin was working on songs for a musical movie and had completed five of the nine songs he contracted to write. His brother,

300 Lexington Pilots Ready in Earhart Search

Armada May Start Hunt Today After Colorado Abandons Hope.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, July 11.—Three hundred Navy fliers aboard the carrier Lexington prepared tonight for a spectacular effort in the search for Amelia Earhart while aviators from the battleship Colorado abandoned hope after four days of scanning the Phoenix Islands.

Heading in the approximate direction of Howland Island but with its exact destination undetermined, the Lexington's 1,299 officers and men concentrated immediate energies on detailed plans for a high speed 200,000-square-mile aerial sweep of the equatorial Pacific. The ship has 62 planes.

"There is only a chance in a million for a rescue," said naval officers directing the search.

They said the main possibility remaining is that Miss Earhart's globe-girdling plane alighted in the water and still is floating. Such a plane could be sighted from the Lexington's air fleet, they said.

May Start Hunt Today.

The Lexington's armada was expected to begin the search tomorrow afternoon or Tuesday, probably first scouting west and south of Howland and extending the search to the Gilbert Islands, toward which the equatorial currents in that area run.

Searchers said, however, there was only an outside chance that the lost plane descended so far short of its goal as the Gilberts, 600 miles east of Howland.

The Phoenix group had been considered the most likely place of finding Miss Earhart and her navigator, Capt. Frederick Noonan, who disappeared July 2 in an attempt to fly 2,700 miles from New Guinea to Howland Island, a leg of their world flight.

Colorado Leaves Islands.

Capt. Wilhelm H. Friedell of the Colorado tentatively ended the ship's search of the Phoenix area and left for a rendezvous with the destroyers Drayton, Lampson and Cushing about 350 miles northeast of Howland Island.

The Colorado still was in position to send out her planes, however, and it was said they possibly might make a final flight Monday.

The planes searched virtually the whole Phoenix area but found nothing to bolster hopes for the fliers' safety.

Separate Pacts In Indiana End Steel Walkout

C. I. O., Youngstown Sheet Sign Agreements With Gov. Townsend.

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, July 11.—Gov. M. Clifford Townsend announced today the Committee for Industrial Organization and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. had signed separate agreements with him, permitting approximately 7,000 employes at the Indiana Harbor, Ind., and South Chicago plants to return to work.

The Governor said work would be resumed tomorrow.

The employes had been idle since the C. I. O., insisting on signed contracts with steel companies, called a strike May 26.

Van Bittner, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, declared the settlement was "a victory for the union."

However, company spokesmen pointed out that Sheet & Tube signed no direct contract with the union, the principal demand of the S. W. O. C. in calling the strike.

Bittner said he had ordered pickets withdrawn from the plants immediately.

The Governor, coatless and his shirt sleeves rolled up, made the announcement at the executive mansion in the presence of Bittner and Thomas R. Hutson, Indiana labor commissioner.

The Governor termed the nine-point agreement made by Youngstown and the C. I. O. a "memorandum of understanding."

The agreement was similar, with one exception, to an agreement made by the Inland Steel Co. and the C. I. O. with the Governor two

Md. Airport Site for D. C. Is Assailed

Camp Springs Held Too Far From City for Municipal Use.

"If the Federal Government wants a great national airport at Camp Springs, Md., 10 miles outside the Capital's downtown area, then let Congress go ahead and build it—and pay for it.

"But if it is a municipal airport that the Washington Airport Commission was thinking of when it reported Saturday to Congress, then we don't want it."

This expresses the reaction of District aviation leaders yesterday to the commission's recommendation for solving Washington's airport problem.

Branding the Maryland plateau, selected by the commission, as a "white elephant," should it ever become an airport for commercial use, these local men indicated they will press "harder than ever" for the eventual approval of Gravelly Point, the site to be developed by filling in the Potomac River south of the Washington-Hoover Airport.

Senator Gibson "Disappointed."

"I am keenly disappointed," said Senator Ernest W. Gibson, of Vermont, who fathered a bill to authorize Gravelly Point as the airport site.

"All civic organizations in the city have expressed themselves in favor of Gravelly Point. And certainly this is something in which the people of Washington should have a voice."

Several proponents of the Gravelly Point site said they were thinking of a possible national terminal for transatlantic airliners.

"Transatlantic service is undoubtedly to be a development of the near future," declared Allen Smythe, secretary of the Aeronautical Club of Washington. "Already Baltimore has leaped out and grasped a contract to furnish the terminal for one transoceanic line. Washington should get in line for other contracts to come.

He said the Aeronautical Club stood for development of Gravelly Point, and an enlargement and improvement of Washington-Hoover Airport to take care of commercial demands until the point is ready for operation.

Did Not "Criticize."

"You can complete Gravelly Point just as soon as you can get Camp Springs ready for use," Smythe said.

Speaking as chairman of the Federation of Citizens Association aviation committee, Edwin Hege wanted it made clear he did not "criticize Camp Springs, if it is to be used as a Federal airport."

"But for a municipal port we are in favor of Gravelly Point because it is close to Washington, and will add to the usable land area of the District of Columbia. At the same time it would afford a place for dumpage of the soil that is being dredged in deepening the Washington channel."

Clarence A. Miller, chairman of the Board of Trade's aviation committee, was also strongly opposed to the Maryland field.

"The citizens of the District don't want to contribute anything to an airport so far away. * * * It would take at least 20 minutes to get to it from downtown Washington.

These and other men interested in aviation's development in the District, said they will follow the course of Washington airport commission's report. If legislation is drafted, after the report is made public, they said they certainly hoped for public hearings at which "views of citizens of the District can be expressed."

The commission's report, drawn up after months of deliberation and study of the countryside around the Capital, will probably be made public today. It will then be referred to committees in both houses.

David Behncke, president of the Airline Pilots Association, said last night his organization would continue to stand back of its original decision to stop landing at the Washington Airport unless facilities suited to the new high-speed equipment are made available.

Behncke stated that the pilots would be willing to co-operate by continuing use of the present field during construction of a suitable field, provided that rules of safety were enforced at the present airport. First of these rules would be the designation of the field as a single runway airport.

China and Japan Hurl Armies Into Great Battle at Peiping; Tokyo Begins Massing Fleet

Peace Move Fails; Fighting Resumed

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, July 11.—Guns roared again tonight along the Yungting River as both Japan and China were reported speeding fresh troops to the North China zone of conflict.

The cannonading, in the fighting area, 10 miles west of this city, was distinctly audible in Peiping. Both Japanese and Chinese admitted fighting had been resumed after negotiations had been broken down.

Peiping itself, in the grip of rigid martial law, was ominously silent. All gates were closed, but from the walls could be heard the rumbling and clanking of Japanese tanks on the nearby roads, apparently moving toward Fengtai, 5 miles southwest of the city.

Five-Night Battle.

It was the fifth night of bloodshed along the Yungting, where fighting began late Wednesday near Marco Polo Bridge, when maneuvering Japanese units clashed with the Twenty-ninth Chinese army.

Tietsin dispatches stated 35 trucks carrying 700 troops of Japan's powerful Manchurian army has passed near Tientsin. This force was heavily armed, especially with machine guns. The soldiers had boarded the trucks at Shanhaikwan, on the China-Manchukuo frontier, after Chinese railway authorities had refused to dispatch their troop trains over the railway southwest of Shanhaikwan, to Tientsin and Peiping.

These reinforcements were believed en route to Fengtai, railway junction about halfway between Peiping and the fighting zone to the west. Fengtai has been the principal Japanese base of operations in this conflict.

Other Japanese troops from Manchuria were reported proceeding by special cars attached to regular trains on the Shanhaikwan-Peiping Railway.

New Truce.

Earlier this evening Japanese and Chinese alike indicated a new truce agreement had been reached. Japanese said the Chinese had accepted four demands. This the Chinese later denied, and Mayor Chin Tehchun of Peiping canceled an earlier announcement of an agreement.

Japanese sources said the four demands, presented to Chinese negotiators by Maj. Gen. Gun Hashimoto, chief of staff of Japan's North China garrison, were:

1. Withdrawal of all Chinese troops from the region around Marco Polo Bridge; 2. Punishment of the Chinese responsible for the conflict; 3. Adequate control of all anti-Japanese activities in North China; 4. Enforcement of measures against communism.

Chinese asserted that the Japanese had violated a previous agreement to withdraw forces from the vicinity of Wanpinghsien, walled village in the center of the battle area. They declared a large force of Japanese with artillery was still there.

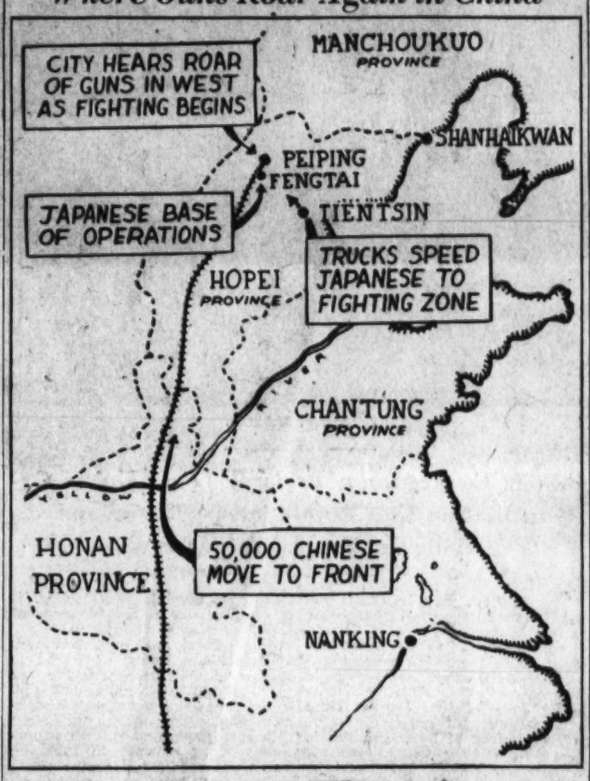

Japanese asserted they actually began withdrawal of their forces to Fengtai at 1:30 p. m.

Sweating Thieves, Scared by Woman, Drop 400-Lb. Safe

While the rest of Washington sweltered in yesterday's heat, two unidentified white men chose one of the year's hottest days to try to carry off a 400-pound safe. The robbery was attempted at an awning store at 1339 H street northeast.

Mrs. Anna Phillips, 27, of that address, told police she was awakened by a slight noise in the morning, and investigated. She said two men were trying to walk off with the safe, and were carrying it out the door, but dropped it and fled when she appeared. The safe contained $215.

3 More Russian Fliers Start Hop to U. S. Across North Pole

Gromoff, Considered One of Soviets' Best Long Distance Aviators, and 2 Companions Take Off for San Francisco.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow (Monday), July 12.—The Soviet air ace, Mikhail Gromoff, hopped off today for the United States, flying by way of the North Pole to San Francisco.

Gromoff's flight comes within three weeks of that made over the North Pole by three Russian aviators who landed at Vancouver, Wash., on June 20.

Those three, Valeri Chekaloff, Georgi Baidukoff and Alexander Beliakoff, passed directly over the North Pole near which the Soviet government has established a scientific camp.

It was first reported that Gromoff's destination might be Chicago.

Another plane expected to make a flight over Arctic areas is to be piloted by Sigismund Levaneffsky, who attempted a transpolar flight from Moscow to San Francisco in August, 1935, but was forced to Emperor Is Returning to Capital; Cabinet in Session.

War Atmosphere Spreads Rapidly

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, July 11.—Japan tonight prepared for extensive military operations in China, if not a formally declared war against the Chinese government.

The government announced more troops were being rushed to the North China zone of conflict, where Japanese and Chinese soldiers have been locked in intermittent but bloody combat since Wednesday night.

The high command, acting with its accustomed speed and decision, dispatched one of its most trusted commanders, Lieut. Gen. Kiyoshi Katsuki, by airplane to take command of the Japanese forces.

These decisions were made public after a day of feverish conferences, in which the highest military and political leaders of the realm laid their views on the Peiping crisis before the Emperor himself.

It was announced that in view of the gravity of the situation, Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako would return to Tokyo tomorrow from Hayama, seaside resort southwest of the capital, where they have been summering.

The Japanese war office announced that Chinese troops stationed in the area west of Peiping had advanced with armored trains to Changtsintien, and that another advance had been made by the Chinese at Papouchan in the direction of Japanese forces.

Refusal of authorities in Nanking to recognize any agreement made by local Chinese authorities led Japanese observers to say they saw little hope of averting war.

Large bodies of Chinese troops were reported moving northward in the trouble zone.

Confer With Emperor.

Field Marshal Prince Kotohito Kanin, chief of the army general staff; Admiral of the Fleet Prince Hiroyasu Fushimi, chief of the naval general staff, and the prime minister, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, were among those who journeyed to Hayama today to advise the sovereign.

The army announced Gen. Katsuki, the new commander in China, already had reached Seoul, Korea, and would continue tomorrow by plane to Hsinking, Manchukuo, to confer with Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda, commander in chief of the Japanese army in Manchuria.

Thereafter he will fly to an unannounced destination in North China.

The Sino-Japanese conflict began about 11 p. m. Wednesday, when troops of Japan's North China garrison on night maneuvers clashed with soldiers of the Chinese Twenty-ninth army near Marco Polo Bridge. Each side said the other fired first; each blamed the other for breaking subsequent truces.

The Cabinet, rising from an emergency, issued a communique indicating Japan was ready for all eventualities. It said "all necessary measures" had been taken to speed reinforcements to the zone of trouble.

Details of troop movements were not announced, although it was known that units of the powerful Japanese army of occupation in Manchuria, called the Kwantung army, had reached Shanhaikwan, on the China-Manuchukuo frontier, presumably en route to the Peiping zone. Japan's army in Manchuria totals about 100,000 men.

The cabinet's communique said Japan was "determined to protect the lives and interests of Japanese nationals in China and at the same time respect the rights and interests of the powers there."

War Funds Available.

It was understood the cabinet also acted to make funds available for immediate military purposes. Finance Minister Okinobu Kaya spent most of the day in conference with his staff discussing means of financing a campaign.

A pronounced war atmosphere spread through Japan as army and navy members of the supreme war council conferred separately and the general staffs of the two services were known to be grappling with their respective problems.

"Two successive incidents in North China (clashes west of Peiping) appear part of a well laid plan by the Chinese, who at present are dispatching large forces to North China. In spite of China's aggressive attitude Japan is still genuine-

Catholics Ask Protestant Aid Against Nazis

Urge United War Against 'Anti-Christ' in Pleas From Pulpits.

By the United Press.

Berlin, July 11.—The Roman Catholic Church tonight invited Germany's Protestant confessionals, scores of whom have been arrested for opposing "Nazification" of the Lutheran Church, to join in a united front against "the anti-Christ."

A plea for unity was read from the pulpits of Catholic churches throughout the Reich, while confessional leaders announced they would stop attacking the government pending action on a plea for an "honorable peace."

The plea for Catholic-Protestant unity said it was noted "with great satisfaction" that the faithful in Protestant churches were remaining staunch and that "even arrests and other tribulations are not sufficient cause for them to leave their church."

"If all remain faithful to the

Eden, on Yacht, Plans for New Spanish Patrol

2-Point Scheme Drafted to Prevent Spread of Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 11.—A new British plan for continuation of European efforts to keep the Spanish war from spreading was given form today aboard a yacht off Deauville.

Diplomats said Anthony Eden, Britain's foreign secretary, outlined a two-point compromise to Sir Eric Phipps, British Ambassador to Paris, for elucidation to the French government.

Eden also had a long telephone conversation with the French foreign minister, Yvon Delbos.

Eden's plan, it was stated, will be presented to an early meeting of the 27 nations nonintervention committee in London in the hope it will break the deadlock between the opposing Anglo-French and Italo-German viewpoints with respect to keeping the Spanish war within bounds.

It provides, first, that as a provisional measure, the full land and sea control over movements of men and arms into Spain would be reestablished. French and British warships would patrol the entire Spanish coastline with Italian and German observers aboard.

Permanent Control Scheme.

Then, as soon as it could be worked out, a permanent control scheme would be substituted. Under this, observers for the nonintervention committee could be placed in all non-Spanish seaports and airports likely to be involved to see that no war supplies or volunteers left for Spain, and in all Spanish ports to see that none landed there.

After this the sea patrol would be abolished. The present deadlock is over this patrol, maintained by Britain, France, Germany and Italy until mid-June. Germany and Italy then withdrew their warships as a result of the Leipzig incident and rejected Anglo-French proposals that the patrol be reconstituted with British and French ships only.

Rome and Berlin urged that the Rain Cuts City Temperature 21 Degrees From High of 93 As Two Drown, Three Are Felled by Heat; 262 Die in U. S.

Two drownings and three prostrations were marked up against a five-day heat wave last night before a sudden storm gave the city at least temporary relief by tumbling the Weather Bureau thermometer more than 21 degrees from the day's high of 93.

Traces of rain were noted by the Weather Bureau as early as 7:30. When the main fall started shortly after 8 the temperature dropped 10 degrees in an hour, bringing it to 72, lower than any recording in the preceding 24 hours.

Officials said the storm was one of local thundershowers that have been breaking out in many sections of the heat-ridden area. Total rainfall here was .12 inches, not enough, forecasters believed, to lower temperatures for long. Their forecast for today was "generally fair, with possible afternoon local thundershowers, little change in temperature."

Most of the Nation sweltered with the Capital yesterday. Deaths in the widespread heat belt mounted to 262. Five have died in the Capital in the last three days.

Philip Marshall, 52, of 2268 Cathedral avenue northwest, drowned in Queens Creek, near Mathews, Va. Marshall, an interior decorator, and reputedly a good swimmer, suffered an attack of acute indigestion while in the water, according to Dr. J. W. D. Haynes, county coroner.

Jesse W. Chism, 23, a taxi driver, drowned early yesterday morning in the Eastern Branch, where he had gone canoeing to escape the heat though an attack of infantile paralysis several years ago had made it impossible for him to swim. Herbert H. Schueler his compion, attached to the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, attempted to rescue Chism, but his efforts failed.

Malby Payne, 22, 1419 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was admitted to Emergency Hospital for heat prostration treatment. Arthur Carpenter, 25, colored, 2008 E street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital and sent home.

Frank Belk, 38, 1136 Twenty-fifth street northwest, was overcome by heat and rushed to Emergency Hospital. His condition was not critical, hospital officials said.

Peak temperature in the District was reached at 4:30 p. m. when the thermometer at the Weather Bureau stood at 93. This was a little under the top for the preceding day, but the difference of about one degree was noticed mostly by thermometers. The lowest temperature for the preceding 24-hour period came at 7 a. m. with 76 degrees. By noon it had warmed up to 86 and kept going up from there until 4:30.

Nearby summer resorts and beaches drew crowds almost as great as the July Fourth week-end, while beach patrols and life guards redoubled their efforts to keep swimmers safe. Seaside Park was invaded by the largest crowd in 37 years. More than 3,700 persons arrived by boat at one time from Baltimore. Police estimated 22,000 cars as the minimum that jammed the area.

Levy on Profits Cited for Rise In Tax Returns

Incomes Furnished 46% of Revenue in '37, Against 40% in '36.

Reviving prosperity and operation of the undistributed profits tax were cited last night by experts as the probable cause of the heavy increase in individual income taxes paid during the fiscal year ended July 1, announced during the day by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Income taxes produced 46 per cent of the $4,652,504,000 of internal revenue collected in 1937, as compared with 40 per cent in 1936, the figures showed. This gain was attributed to generally better business conditions.

The amount yielded by individual income tax payments surpassed that by corporations. In 1937, the Government received $1,094,492,000 from individuals in such levies, as against $674,416,000 the previous year. Corporation income tax collections, however, rose only to $1,054,888,000 in 1937 from the $738,522,000 of the year before.

Shift in Listings.

The new tax on undivided corporation profits probably drove into the individual taxable income listings revenue which otherwise would have been listed on corporate returns, it was generally believed.

The total of income tax collections for 1937 was $2,149,381,000, whereas in 1936 the total was $1,412,939,000, a gain of $736,442,000 in this source alone.

Among other taxes last year, liquor levies provided $592,301,000, an increased of $66,878,000 over the previous fiscal period. Excess profits taxes increased $10,457,000 to $24,967,000 and miscellaneous levies rose $124,407,000 to $1,620,000,000.

Social Security Yield.

Social security taxes became effective for the first time in the 1937 fiscal year, yielding $265,755,000.

Among individual States, New York continued to be the most important source of Federal revenue, providing $976,200,000 in all the internal categories. This was about one-fifth of aggregate receipts.

North Dakota remained the lowest income producer, paying $1,307,000 in the last fiscal period.

Fire Extinguished, 2 Trucks Collide On Return Trip

An exploding oil heater yesterday damaged the basement of the John W. Roderick residence, 6402 Broad street, Brookmont, Md., and indirectly caused injury to the rear of a Bethesda, Md., fire truck.

The fire, caused by the explosion, was extinguished after members of four fire truck companies from Bethesda, Glen Echo and Cabin John answered the alarm.

On the way back to their station house the two Bethesda trucks collided when the driver of one of them halted to avoid an auto swinging into Conduit road. As the first truck suddenly stopped, the second one, immediately behind, crashed into it, damaging its rear steps and some equipment.

2 Dead, 21 Injured In Triple Collision

Annapolis, Md., July 11 (AP).—A crash of a motor truck and two automobiles on the Annapolis-Baltimore boulevard near Robinson Station resulted today in the death of at least two colored persons and the injury of 21 others, 2 probably fatally.

State Patrolman B. J. Noland and Officer William L. Brown, jr., of Ferndale, reported the truck was carrying 25 colored excursionists to their homes in Baltimore. They said William Davis was driving. The officers said the drivers of the automobiles were Ellison Curry, 49, and Wayland Dunaway, 44, both of Baltimore.

Curry's wife died at the South Baltimore Hospital an hour after the accident. A colored girl was killed instantly. Sixteen of the injured were taken to the Baltimore hospital and six were brought to the Emergency Hospital here.

Bolt of Lightning Melts Spectacles

New York, July 11 (AP).—Witnesses said a bolt of lightning apparently burned the lenses out of a man's glasses here tonight. He was wearing the spectacles when it happened.

Max Haas, 23, of The Bronx, was walking in Crotona Park when the lightning struck. He was found semiconscious by Alexander Kurtz, who said he also was knocked down by the bolt.

Kurtz and a passerby said the silver bridge of Haas' glasses appeared to have been oxidized by the heat and that the rims held a deposit of melted glass.

The band of his wrist watch also was split. The watch was still running and the young man himself, taken to a hospital, appeared to be unharmed, except that he could not remember where he had been going and was not sure of his name and address. Identification was verified by cards in his pockets.

Pastor Backs Teacher In Sermon on Gossips

Saugus, Mass., July 11 (AP).—The pastor of the church attended by pretty, blonde Isabelle Hallin, 26-year-old high school teacher "invited" to resign by the school committee, today came to her defense against "gossip and rumors."

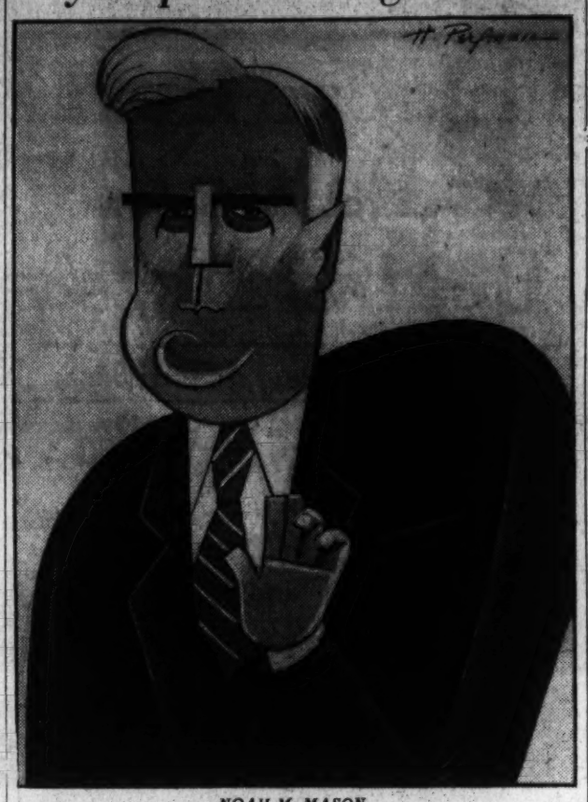

Declaring a public hearing was necessary for the good of all concerned, even the school committee," the Rev. Harold Thurston Handley, rector of the St. John's Episcopal Church, sounded a warning in his sermon against "those who pass judgment on a person's character too casually."

Guild Strike Continues.

Seattle, July 11 (AP).—The Seattle Star management today renewed its invitation to striking American Newspaper Guild members to return to their jobs, but the Guild-men opened strike headquarters and gave no indication a settlement was in prospect.

New Faces in Congress

C. I. O. Holds Peril of Revolt, Says Rep. Noah Morgan Mason

NOAH M. MASON.

Illinois Congressman Declares Lewis Union Organization Uses Revolutionary Tactics and Is Carrying Out Program of Moscow Reds.

The C. I. O. may be God's gift to industrial unionism, but, as far as Noah Morgan Mason, of Illinois, is concerned, it has a Marxist ideology, with American trimmings.

Short and stocky, the 55-year-old Republican Representative belabored John L. Lewis' brain child as a harbinger of red revolt.

"As a friend of labor and the A. F. of L., I view with alarm the growth of vertical unionism," he said. "The Committee for Industrial Organization is not only resorting to revolutionary tactics, it is carrying out of the program of the international Comintern."

turn back when the plane developed trouble.

Gromoff was the regular pilot of the big Russian airplane Maxim Gorky, but was not aboard it when the ship crashed in May, 1935, killing 49 persons.

With a minimum of ostentation and farewells, three fliers, headed by Gromoff, took off from Tachelkovo Field, about 35 miles outside of Moscow.

Their plane is identical with that used by Chekaloff on the recent hop to the United States.

The fliers said they would hop over the Pole and continue toward the West Coast of the United States, flying as far as possible.

Completion of the flight would break the aviation distance record held by the Frenchmen Paul Codas and Maurice Rossi, who flew 5,637 miles from New York to Syria in August, 1935.

Nimrod Man Held On Arson Charge

Charlottesville, Va., July 11.—Charged with setting fire Thursday to the home of Edgar Shiflett, of Nimrod, Greene County, Oliver Shiflett was arrested yesterday by Sheriff William Snow, of Greene, and held for trial. He was released on a $1,000 bond.

Shiflett is accused of firing the Edgar Shiflet house while it was occupied by the family. Awakened by smell of smoke and crackling of the flames, the family escaped with a few belongings.

Bloodhounds were taken to the scene of the fire and put on the scent. The trail led straight to the home of Jack Shiflett. Oliver Shiflett and 13 other persons on the premises at the time were all lined up and, according to officials, the dogs unhesitatingly picked Oliver Shiflett out of the bunch. The identification maneuver was tried a second time and again the hounds picked Oliver. The arrest followed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 11.—Members of the executive council of the West Virginia Bar Association were guests of the association president, Harry H. Byrer, this city, here yesterday for luncheon and later at an outing at Rippling Springs.

Principal business transacted was making plans for the annual meeting, to be held September 16, 17 and 18 at White Sulphur Springs.

Members attending included Thomas Jackson, Wheeling, chairman of the council; Wright Hugus, Wheeling; William G. Stathers, Clarksburg, members of the council; Frank G. Raymond, Fairmont; Charles Mead, Wheeling. Members of the Berkeley County Bar Association, of which Attorney Harry A. Downs is president, attended the luncheon also.

Liberties Union Hails Court Aid Of Labor Rights

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 11.—Approval of the Wagner act by the Supreme Court and revelations by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee of what was termed "employers' lawless tactics" were hailed last night in the seventeenth annual report of the American Civil Liberties Union as having "combined to put a new foundation under labor's right."

At the same time the Union, in its survey of its activities the past year, found that the "increased power of labor" has resulted in new "repressive activities."

"Freedom to agitate causes opposed by powerful interests is looking up," the Union said. "Not all the States so reported, but the trend was marked in a substantial number. Any such improved tendency must, of course, be regarded as only relative, for the forces of repression remain constant in a society marked by inherent sharp conflict in politics, industry, race and religion."

In a statement the union added:

"Heading the union's list of 'worst areas' in the United States in which violations of civil rights prevailed during the past year, are Tampa, Fla., and the neighboring citrus fruit district; Harlan County, Ky., and the Imperial Valley of Southern California. Other leading centers of repression listed in the report are the cotton and farm area of eastern Arkansas, where sharecroppers and tenants have sought to organize; the automobile towns of Michigan and the Middle West; Gallup, N Mex., dominated by coal companies opposed to union organization; Jersey City, N. J., and vicinity dominated by Mayor Frank Hague and others under open shop influence. . . .

"Outstanding events of the year commended by the union in its report are led by the decisions of the United States Supreme Court upholding the national labor relations act, freeing Angelo Herndon, upholding the Wisconsin labor injunction law and with it similar laws in 15 States, and reversing the conviction of Dirk DeJonge, Oregon Communist convicted under the State criminal syndicalism law. Strongly approved also in the work of the Senate Committee on Civil Liberties, the repeal of the 'red rider, in the District of Columbia and the refusal of Gov. Murphy to permit violations of strikers' rights."

RA Will Warn Farm Migrants Of Speculators

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

The Resettlement Administration last night moved to safeguard drought-stricken farmers, driven from their farms by protracted years of unfavorable weather, from the menace of what has been called "profiteering in human suffering."

Regional directors, here for a series of conferences with RA executives, outlined new plans for warning farmers against purchasing marginal land from speculators at exorbitant prices. Forced to leave their homesteads because of four major droughts since 1930, the farmers of the drought trough have shifted to other regions. Land speculators in some sections have tried to unload nearly worthless land on these people or have charged prices in excess of a conservative valuation.

Already some of the regional directors and their field agents have told farmers to consult impartial persons such as county farm supervisors, as to the real worth of a piece of land before they buy.

Calvin Ward, regional director for the drought States of North and South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas, said that conditions were serious in his section and that additional farmers in the region undoubtedly would shift away from their farms if the dry, hot weather continues crop destruction.

Ward said that unofficial estimates show that as many as one out of every five farmers in the four-State region had left their farms since the drought cycle started in 1930. During the record drought of 1936 three out of every four farmers were forced on relief, he said.

The regional driector for the northern drought area said that studies were being made for irrigation from the Missouri and smaller rivers which would open up new and what is believed to be profitable lands for those drought-stricken farmers.

One expert estimated that it would require at least $100,000,000 to take farmers off land that is subject to recurring droughts and re-establish them on land which could reasonably be expected to be profitable.

Colored Section Observes 50 Years Of Race Progress

Mound Bayou, Miss., July 11 (AP). Mound Bayou—to the colored man symbolic of freedom and initiative born in the heart of a former slave—surveyed a half century of successful enterprise today.

Memorial services were held this afternoon, inaugurating a week's celebration.

Flags and bunting bedecked the town of 2,000 colored people, who look only to members of their own race for their government, banking, merchandise and farm products.

Two Papers Suspended As Guild Calls Strike

Decatur, Ill., July 11 (AP).—Indefinite suspension of the Morning Decatur Herald and the afternoon Decatur Review, where an American Newspaper Guild strike was called yesterday, was announced tonight by Edward Lindsay, editor.

Lindsay said the management was unwilling to subject its "loyal employes" to possible injury or embarrassment by asking them to pass through picket lines established by the striking workers.

Dallas C. I. O. Attorney To Sue Ford Employes

Dallas, July 11 (AP).—W. J. Houston, local attorney for the Committee for Industrial Organization, beaten in a street fight, said today he would file charges against several Ford Motor Co. employes.

Houston was attacked Saturday as he left a drugstore in the downtown district. The lawyer said he was struck, knocked down and kicked. Police broke up the fight. Three who said they were Ford men told police Houston approached them about joining the C. I. O. The C. I. O. has been attempting to organize the Ford branch plant here.

Harvard Club Replaces Portrait of Roosevelt

New York, July 11 (AP).—The New York Times said tonight a large portrait of President Roosevelt had been taken from a place of honor in the Harvard Club, and had been replaced by a painting of the president of the organization, Langdon P. Marvin.

Quoting an unidentified official of the club, the Times said "politics had nothing to do with it." The portrait of President Roosevelt, the newspaper said, had been removed to a less conspicuous position.

Crew of U. S. Ship Risks Lives To Save 750 in Great Volcano

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, July 11.—The American freighter Golden Bear lost one crew member, but by heroic measures rescued 750 persons from death when two great volcanic eruptions destroyed the town of Rabaul, New Britain, New Guinea, May 29.

Capt. E. M. Olsen, of the Golden Bear, described the cataclysm and rescue on arrival today of the Matson Line freighter.

Risking envelopment of his ship and all hands in the lava flow, Olsen said his men made their way ashore to lead 750 persons, mostly women and children, out of the doomed city.

Victor A. Costner, the Golden Bear's radio man, disappeared, Olsen said, as crew members groped their way ashore in pitch darkness, through downpours of volcanic ashes, and pumice.

Olsen said more than 250 persons perished under the searing lava. He said hundreds of others would have perished had they not received warning and a chance to escape on the Golden Bear. Other accounts of the disaster had estimated the dead at 500.

Earthquakes preceded the eruption, Olsen said.

Ships Called to Aid.

At 4 p. m. May 29 a submarine crater on Volcano Island, in the harbor area, "burst wide open with a tremendous roar," Olsen added.

"It sent a column of white steam and black lava thousands of feet into the air," he continued, "and these spreading columns enveloped Volcano Island.

"The lava and steam drifted over to the mainland."

Olsen said the Golden Bear quickly was covered with ashes and pumice. Then her crew went ashore to rescue the 750 persons huddled in an emergency camp.

Three operators from the Australian administrator's office used the freighter's radio to summon aid from nearby vessels.

During the night most of the Babaul population moved to nearby Nondup. Using its two lifeboats and a work boat, the Golden Bear took the refugees to Kopopo, 15 miles distant.

Caked with 6 to 12 inches of pumice and lava, the Golden Bear moved out of the habor next day.

"We narrowly escaped being enveloped by the flow from the volcano," said Olsen. "A column of steam and black lava shot up from Mount Tavurvur, an old crater on the opposite side of the harbor from Volcano Island.

Eruptions Awesome Sight.

"Rabaul received the full force of this downpour of ashes and pumice. If the population previously hadn't been ordered out, the death toll would have been far greater."

"These volcanoes," he said, "continued erupting for two days.

"It was an awesome sight—two streams of smoke and lava in the day time, shooting up and joining about 4,000 feet in the air to form an enormous arch above the harbor entrance.

"At night the eruption appeared like an immense display of fireworks."

When the Gold Bear returned to Rabaul June 12, Olsen said, Volcano Island towered 850 feet, where previously it had stood only a few feet out of the water.

"The harbor surface was covered with a layer of floating lava," said Capt. Olsen. "No water could be seen."

"Everything was covered with gray pumice and ashes.

"All vegetation was dead. Roads were blocked, littered with fallen trees and limbs. The odor was terrible."

7 More Pledge For Community Chest's Drive

Local, Federal Dignitaries to Aid in Leading Fund Campaign.

Seven new members, including local and Federal dignitaries, were added yesterday to the 26 already pledged to command next year's Community Chest campaign, bringing the total to 33.

Among those who announced their willingness to serve yesterday were: United States Solicitor General Stanley Reed; Morris Cafritz, local builder; Frank Birgfeld, chief clerk of the Treasury Department; Maj. Gen. Merritee W. Ireland, U. S. A., retired; Dr. W. W. Stockberger, chief of personnel, Department of Agriculture; Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor of the District of Columbia. Assistant Secretary of State Wilbur J. Carr will serve until he leaves for a new post in Czechoslovakia.

Campaign officials feel that with these citizens pledging a "united front," a long step toward the formation of an efficient group of campaign workers will have been taken.

Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, chairman of the Speakers Unit, has received assurances from more than 100 church pastors that they will present the cause of the Community Chest to their congregations on one of the two Community Chest Sundays, October 31 or November 7.

Chairman Clarence Phelps Dodge has written to the president of each of the 65 federated welfare organizations comprising the Chest asking tnem to sign up for service in the campaign. Each organization president is asked to accept individual responsibility for his portion of the campaign procedure which will include writing to each of his board members asking for a similar pledge from them.

Ulster to Guard Boyne Celebration

Belfast, Northern Ireland, July 11 (AP).—Ulster police mobilized all available reserves of men and arms today to maintain order among the thousands of Orangemen—Irish Protestants—who tomorrow will celebrate the 247th anniversary of the battle of the Boyne.

The traditional observance has often been marked with violence such as the rioting which two years ago took nine lives and wounded more than 50.

Orangemen, who take their name from King William III, Prince of Orange, celebrate the anniversary of the battle July 12, 1690, in which William's army defeated the forces of the Stuart King James II at the River Boyne. James was forced to flee to France, William occupied Dublin, and Protestantism was securely established as the official religion of Great Britain.

12-Hour Show Set Tomorrow At Anacostia

Arrangements Complete for Second Annual Festival.

A 12-hour "marathon" entertainment will get under way at 10 a. m. tomorrow when citizens south and east of the Anacostia River begin their second intercommunity festival at Anacostia Park.

Last year 1,500 enjoyed a similar field day. A baby beauty show was the hit of the program, the parade a close second, and there was a dance.

They plan to take advantage of the cool of morning to stage athletic events. There will be a picnic basket lunch at 12:30 p. m.

Dedication ceremonies will be held for the new Anacostia swimming pool, with a brief address by Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia. Main water events are scheduled for from 4:30 to 5:30. Later there is to be a softball game.

Time out for supper will be called from 6 to 7 p. m. A gala parade in the evening will include floats, historic and comic, prepared by individuals and associations of Anacostia. Final event is a vaudeville at 8:30 p. m.

The festival is sponsored by all the citizens' associations lying south and east of the river.

Peace Prayer Is Broadcast to World by Pope

Pontiff's Appeal Marks Opening of French Cathedral.

By the Associated Press.

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, July 11.—Pope Pius, his voice carried throughout the world by radio, prayed today to his Creator for "a little tranquillity" on earth and for recognition of God's "divine sovereignty, obedience to His holy laws" and for the practice of justice and charity.

The pontiff was speaking on the inauguration of a new cathedral at Lisieux, France, dedicated to St. Theresa. He said, in French:

"Let us pray to the Creator, who for that very reason is the Supreme Lord of heaven and earth, of peoples and of nations. Let us pray to this world, so distraught and confused, and to all these peoples, who are so oppressed by the miseries of today and so fearful of tomorrow. He may grant a little tranquillity, in order and in peace, with a return to those ways which are the only ways, recognition of His divine sovereignty, obedience to His holy laws, practice of justice and a charity more bountiful to those who have less and for that very reason are in greater need and suffering."

Broadcasts From Library.

The Pope, sitting at his desk in the private library of his summer residence here, could not prevent his voice from trembling with emotion when he spoke of St. Theresa, his favorite saint. His voice filled with feeling, moreover, when he made an indirect reference to the belief his own life is drawing toward its close.

He asked his hearers to pray "that they may, without fear and even with confidence, draw close, as they do with each passing day, to the tribunal of God to render an account of their guardianship, that is, of our soul."

Doctor at Pope's Side.

"It is to tell you, dearly beloved children," he went on, "to pray with a particular sense of filial piety for us, upon whom this accounting bears heaviest and for whom it is closest at hand, that we say to you with the Apostle: Pray for us; we pray for you; let us pray for one another that we may be saved."

The Pope's physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, remained with him until the speech was finished and then soon returned to Rome, finding that the pontiff showed no ill effects.

Services Draw 300,000.

Lisieux, France, July 11 (AP).—Nearly 300,000 pilgrims flocked to this little town today for the inauguration of the Basilica of St. Theresa, at which Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, presided.

Five other cardinals attended, including Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia. Three infantry regiments were required to keep the crowds in line.

Downing Elected Rehoboth Mayor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Rehoboth Beach, Del., July 11.—J. Arthur Downing, former tax collector of Rehoboth Beach, won a 3-to-1 victory over his opponent, Mayor Freda Ross, at the election for mayor and commissioners Saturday. Downing was the favorite mayor candidate for the faction electing Willard H. Johnson as city manager, led by Lammot duPont, jr., of Wilmington, a resort property owner.

Three commissioners elected were J. Sanderson Trump, Philadelphia, who topped the ticket with 474 ballots; David C. Asphil, Wilmington, 467, and John M. Lecato, Rehoboth, 459, re-elected.

The town, Delaware's largest ocean resort, was reincorporated May 29 as the City of Rehoboth Beach at an election providing for a city manager.

Court Bill Assailed By Senator Capper

By the Associated Press.

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, said yesterday in a radio address broadcast in Kansas that he considers the controversy over judiciary reorganization "a fight between the President and the people themselves."

"This fight is a war to save the constitutional form of Government for the United States, and it should be recognized as such by the people," Capper said.

"It is not an ordinary disagreement between two political parties. It is not even the usual struggle between the President and the Congress for supremacy in Government."

Schuler, swam 30 yards to shore, and then discovered that Chism was not following him. He plunged back into the water, reached Chism and attempted to pull him to the bank. His efforts failed.

Chism, relatives said yesterday, had once suffered an attack of infantile paralysis and was unable to swim. The body was recovered by harbor police shortly afterward.

Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. Mary E. Lloyd, a stepfather, Philemon D. Lloyd; three brothers, Lawrence Chism, Middleburg, Va.; Clarence and Arthur Chism, who live in Washington, and a sister, Edna Chism.

Heavy rains were reported in two sections of Kansas, while occasional thunderstorms swept scattered areas during the day. Further thunderstorms were expected, but weather forecasters believed thy would have little effect on temperatures.

Kansas Reports Rain.

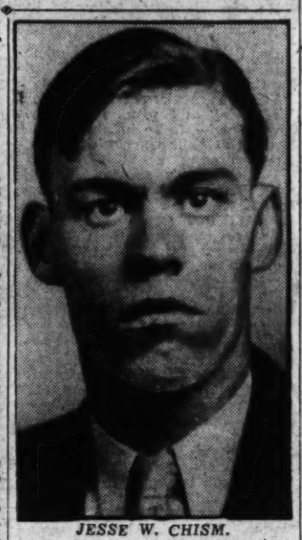

A two-and-a-half-inch rainfall was reported at Osborne, Kans., since midnight Saturday, and another heavy fall hit Clay Center, Kans. Skies at Kansas City were overcast during most of the day, but the thermometer hovered around 80.

Chicago was keeping pace with Washington as temperature there hit the 93-degree mark, and Detroit with 90 degrees was not far behind.

Meteorologists told the Associated Press the heat wave was following a path almost identical to that of the 1936 siege which lasted eight days.

Drowning tolls were expected to mount as beaches were jammed. In larger cities many spent the night in parks, and others paused in their strolling before the cool doors of air-conditioned theaters.

At Newark, N. J., where the heat wave was expected to continue through today, the humidity was .66 and the temperature was 86 shortly after noon. Some relief was brought to central Indiana by rain.

JESSE W. CHISM.

According to Associated Press listing of deaths attributed to heat, New York led the list with 38, followed by Michigan, 27; Pennsylvania, 24; Connecticut, 20; New Jersey, 18; Illinois, 16; Massachusetts, 15; Indiana, 7; Rhode Island, 6; Minnesota, 4; Maine, Iowa, Nebraska and the District of Columbia, 3 each; Ohio, Virginia and Maryland, 2 each, and 1 in Wisconsin and Missouri.

Temperatures Elsewhere.

Other temperatures reported by the Associated Press were: Philadelphia, 90; Richmond, 93.8; Winston-Salem, N. C., 95; Lauren, S. C., 101; Minneapolis, Minn., 93.

Six West Virginia communities were reported to have been stricken by floods, when two creeks overflowed their banks and drove between 300 and 400 families from their homes.

Eight Lake Michigan bathers were knocked unconscious and six of them badly hurt when lightning struck a tree under which they had sought shelter during the storm. Chicago estimated a minimum of 500,000 crowded the lake front beaches.

24 More Die In Russia as Rail Wreckers

Siberia Executions Total 241 in 2 Months as Coal Output Falls.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, July 11.—Advices received tonight by the Japanese Embassy here said that 24 more alleged wreckers of Soviet Russia railways were executed Saturday at Khabarovsk, in Siberia.

The announcement was made in an issue of the Khabarovsk Pacific Ocean Star.

The executions brought to 241 the number killed at Khabarovsk and Svobodny, in Siberia, in the last two months.

Those who faced the firing squad yesterday, like those previously executed, were alleged to have been employed by the Japanese intelligence service to wreck Russia's Far Eastern railways.

Izvestia, organ of the Soviet government, said today that coal production in the Don Basin, one of the chief indexes of the industrial condition of the Soviet Union, fell 6,000,000 tons, or about 15 per cent, short of the plan for the first half of 1937.

The Don Basin supplies about 65 per cent of Russia's coal.

"Trotskyist and Bucharinite wreckers have inflicted tremendous harm on the Don Basin," Izvestia said in explanation of the failure. It referred to alleged followers of Leon Trotsky, an exile in Mexico, and Nikola Bucharin, now in prison awaiting trial on charges of treason.

"They have disorganized production in many shifts," the newspaper continued, "and have led to systematic non-fulfillment of the plan. More than 50 per cent of the shortage was due to accidents, which occur daily. Instead of accidents being investigated and prevented, the rotten wrecking theory persists that such accidents are inevitable."

Troops Crush Holy Land Riot; 20 Killed, Hurt

Division of Palestine Brings New Protests to British.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, July 11.—More than a score of persons were killed and wounded in the upper Jezreh district Friday in a clash between troops and demonstrators demanding a separate mandate and dissociation from the Syrian republic, advices reaching here today said.

The reports, received from Damascus, said troops attempted to break up demonstrations held in mosques.

Mosques were emptied as crowds stormed government offices. The district governor was believed to have been killed. Troops were forced to fire into the crowd to break up the attack.

Plan Condemned.

In Jerusalem, the Arab National Defense Party issued a manifesto tonight severely condemning recommendations of the British Royal Commisison for splitting Palestine into separate Arab and Jewish states and the creation of a new British mandate controlling the holy cities of Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Nazareth.

Ragheb Bay Nashashibi, former mayor of Jerusalem, presided at an executive party meeting. The manifesto said his party was interested in a "noble Arab nation" and could not see the partition scheme as a solution.

Iraq Also Opposed.

The Arab higher committee received a telegram from the leader of the Shiah Sect in Iraq (a sect composing the majority of the population in Iraq) expressing strong opposition to the partition.

Over 500 telegrams of protest were received from various societies and religious committees by the Arab higher committee.

The higher committee will meet here July 12 to discuss replies from Arab princes and kings on future policies.

John Shibe, 66, Retired Head of Athletics, Dead

Philadelphia, July 11 (AP).—John D. Shibe, a former president of the Philadelphia American League club, died today in a convalescent home. He was 66.

He was a son of Benjamin Shibe, who bought an interest in the club at the time of its organization in 1901 by Connie Mack. The elder Shibe was president until his death in 1924, when another son, Thomas S., succeeded him.

John became president after his brother's death last year and served a short time until illness forced his retirement. Mack, manager of the club, succeeded him.

John was secretary of the club from its beginning until his father's death. Then he served as vice president and secretary until he became president. Last August he retired, expressing a hope that after a year he might resume an active interest.

Shibe Park, home of the Philadelphia Athletics, was named for Benjamin Shibe.

ly anxious to localize the affair in the interest of preserving peace in Asia and hopes that reconsideration of the situation by China can yet re-establish peace.

Palace Put On Guard.

"What Japan seeks from China is apology for unwarranted attacks, reparation for the slain Japanese soldiers and suppression of all anti-Japanese movements."

The navy as well as the army prepared for action. After conference with his staff, Admiral Mistumasa Yonai, navy minister, instructed Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, commanding the third fleet, in China waters, to take proper measures for protection of Japanese nationals and interests in both North and South China.

The government instructed consuls in China to prepare to evacuate Japanese residents if necessary for their safety.

Police chiefs throughout Japan were instructed to afford every protection to foreign residents, especially Chinese. Provincial governors were ordered to keep newspapers from publishing matter designed to inflame feeling against China.

Nanking Sends Troops.

Nanking, July 11 (AP).—China moved today to meet the threat of large-scale Japanese military operations in North China.

A government spokesman said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, leader of the Nanking regime, was moving 50,000 troops northward by the Peiping-Hankow Railway.

At present these troops were said to be between the Yangtsze and Yellow Rivers, principally in Honan Province.

"China now realizes that Japan is trying to make Hopei Province another Manchukuo," declared T. T. Li, spokesman of the foreign office in the official Nanking comment on the crisis.

Clash Is Feared.

Hopei is the province which contains Peiping and Tientsin and in which Japanese military and economic influence has been increasing the last four years. Manchukuo is the protectorate established by Japan in China's former Manchurian provinces.

"China still hopes to settle the incident peacefully," Li continued, "but further operations will meet China's unreserved opposition. We hope for peace, but frankly are pessimistic about it. More trouble seems to be inevitbale."

Dr. Hu-shih, on of China's outstanding intellectuals, now in Nanking, said:

"The North China chaos is the result of a premeditated Japanese plan to control Peiping."

Situation Held Grave.

Shinrokuro Hidaka, Japanese Charge d'Affairs here, visited Foreign Minister Wang Chung-hui, called attention to the gravity of the Peiping situation and declared Japan "reserves the right to take appropriate measures."

The foreign minister was understood to have replied that the reported concentration of large numbers of Japanese troops at Shanhaikwan and other points on the Great Wall of China "will not help settle the situation."

Dispatches from Peiping said it was reliably understood that reinforced Japanese units were preparing to surround Peiping and expel Chinese forces from all territory within a 10-mile radius from that city.

Norris Power Bill Is Called 'Ruinous'

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Investors, Inc., said yesterday enactment of the power development provisions of the Norris regional planning bill would destroy "billions of dollars" of private investments and add corresponding amounts to the tax burden.

The federation condemned the plan for seven regional planning authorities proposed by President Roosevelt. The Federation said:

"It would put the Government into the electrical power business in direct competition with practically every investor-owned utility operating company in the country. . . .

"This revolutionary proposal marks another step in carefully conceived plans to establish a dominant Government monopoly in industry upon the ruins of a politically-throttled system of private initiative."

2 Robbers With Knife Get $24, Flee in Cab

Caral Andrews, 464 K street northwest, was held up and robbed of $24 Saturday night at Sixth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, by two colored men, police said.

According to police, one of the robbers threatened Andrews with a knife and searched his pockets while the others held him. The men escaped in a waiting taxicab.

Club Maps Program For Cotton Carnival

At a meeting tonight, the Women's City Club will complete plans for the Cotton Carnival which it will stage Thursday in the alley in the rear of the club.

Dancing, a stage show, a style show, fencing, bridge, and fortune telling will feature the carnival, according to Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman. Proceeds will be used to retire club debts.

Gershwin Dies After Removal Of Brain Tumor

Ira, who will have charge of funeral arrangements, probably will complete the lyrics for the movie.

Made Jazz Popular.

George Gershwin, the composer whose works opened the doors of many concert halls to jazz as an honest musical medium, began his professional career as a $15-a-week piano-pounder in a New York music house.

Born in Brooklyn, September 26, 1898, a son of Morris and Rose Gershwin, he displayed his first interest in music at the age of 10, nine years before he composed his first musical comedy.

The Gershwin family's finances were stretched to provide George with lessons at 50 cents each.

Eventually he came under the tutelage of Charles Hambitzer, jr., who gave him his first direct encouragement, and recognized in young Gershwin great musical possibilities.

Unfriendly to the limitations of prescribed schooling, George left the High School of Commerce after two years for his first job—$15 a week for "plugging" songs at Remick's Music House.

After two years he left that job for another as pianist in a theater, but he fled without collecting his pay when a comedian "razzed" him unmercifully from the stage.

Signed as Composer.

Then came a period as accompanist to Louise Dresser, in which Gershwin met Max Dreyfuss, the guiding genius of a music publishing house, who offered him $35 a week to write music on "his own time."

The musical compositions which followed Gershwin's original job as a composer ranged widely from the lightly popular "kit" tunes to the famous "Rhapsody in Blue," which the composer considered one of his three outstanding works.

It was "Rhapsody in Blue" which established Gersehwin as a leader among modern composers of popular music. His earliest musical comedy, "La La Lucille," was written when he was only 19, and there followed the scores for five of George White's Scandals, and for "Lady Be Good," "Funny Face" and "Let Them Eat Cake."

Won Pulitzer Prize.

Foremost among his compositions were the scores for "Of Thee I Sing," a musical comedy satirizing Washington's political life, for which the young musician was awarded a Pulitzer prize in 1932.

Another of his more lasting achievements was "Porgy and Bess," an operatic version of Heyward's Negro-life play, "Porgy," which was staged by the Theater Guild.

Gershwin classed "Concerto in F," and "American in Paris," with his famous "Rhapsody in Blue." "Sewanee" was so popular that more than 2,000,000 copies of the number were sold.

Following the growing popularity of Gershwin's songs, and his own popularity as a concert musician and director, Gershwin was drafted by both the radio and the motion picture industry. He divided his time in recent years between New York and Hollywood, purchasing a Beverly Hills home in which many of his revisions for the screen were done. Gershwin never appeared personally in pictures, but wrote the music for many popular screen hits.

Never Married.

Associates estimated the number of his compositions, many of which have not been published, at more than 1,000. Gershwin, himself, said he usually did about three musical comedies a year, each one containing many numbers.

Gershwin stressed a belief that his music was meant to be truly representative of American life.

"No composer knows what the next decade in music will disclose, but to be true music and lasting, it must repeat the thoughts and aspirations of the people and the times," he once said. "My people are Americans. My time is today."

Riedel and duPont Win Glider Honors

Elmira, N. Y., July 11 (AP).—Peter Riedel, German glider pilot, received the Bendix gold trophy tonight for the longest distance flight made in the national soaring contests ending here today.

Riedel's 133-mile flight to Elizabeth, Pa., topped by 12 miles that of Harlan Ross, Montebello, Calif., who received the Bendix silver trophy as runner-up.

At the same time, Richard C. duPont, Wilmington, Dela., received the A. Felix duPont gold trophy for the greatest altitude attained in the meet, 5,890 feet in a flight to Pulaski, N. Y.

The crowning of the 1937 glider champions climaxed a final day of competition in which five ships crashed. None of the birdmen was injured.

Catholics Ask Protestant Aid Against Nazis

Urge United War Against 'Anti-Christ' in Pleas From Pulpits.

Christian faith all will go well," the plea said. "All Christians must stand together and not be diverted from the struggle against the anti-Christ."

The Catholics attacked the German press for its accounts of the trials of priests and lay Catholics accused of immorality and said newspaper accounts were "not always true."

Confessional leaders throughout the Reich read to their congregations a manifesto announcing that a conference of Lutheran Church dignitaries has sued for an armistice.

They addressed a plea to the ministry of interior and Reich Church Minister Hans Kerrl seeking "an honorable peace with the church, a peace which would serve the welfare of the nation as well as of congregations."

Meanwhile, the confessional pastors and their subordinates agreed to "refrain from rendition of the details of the church's distress."

Churches were crowded for reading of the manifesto, which asked congregations to pray that the government would "render unto God that which is God's."

U. S. Citizen Accused.

Berlin, July 11 (AP).—Gustav Gareis, an evangelical assistant pastor who claims United States citizenship, was named as defendant today in an immorality trial at Nurnberg. Together with four German youths he was charged with sex offenses. A verdict is expected tomorrow.

The United States Consulate General in Berlin has been following the case closely. It has been given wide publicity. Julius Steicher's paper, the Frankische Zeitung, devoted a full page to it.

Gareis was born in Germany and was a theological student when he emigrated to the United States. He lived in several American cities, including Milwaukee, where he stayed nine years and acquired American citizenship.

He made brief visits to Germany in 1934 and 1935, and when he came on a third visit in 1936 he decided to remain. He preached at Lichtenhof near Nurnberg as assistant to a Nurnberg pastor and was listed in church papers as a pastor. He was not, however, an ordained clergyman. In the trial witnesses testified that his colorful accounts of life in the United States were an aid to seduction.

Hessian Flies Damage Maryland Wheat Crop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, July 11.—The Hessian fly has reduced part of Washington County's wheat crop at least 20 per cent, farmers in the Downsville district reported after completing threshing.

R. F. Wilkinson, who harvested his largest crop of 3,300 bushels several years ago, and 2,400 bushels last year, had a yield of but 2,100 bushels this year, or slightly over 21 bushels to the acre. Wilkinson said the yield this year would give the farmers no profit.

Eden, on Yacht, Plans for New Spanish Patrol

2-Point Scheme Drafted to Prevent Spread of Conflict.

naval patrol be abandoned and belligerent rights be accorded both Spanish factions.

France injected another blow at the control system yesterday by announcing she would suspend the international barrier along her Spanish frontier Tuesday unless Portugal re-established a similar barrier.

According to the Eden plan the knotty questions of removal of volunteers from Spain and belligerency rights would be taken up later after political passions had cooled.

Eden, who came to Deauville aboard Lord Kemsley's yacht Princess, returned tonight.

Paris newspapers expressed alarm over German press attacks against France. A foreign office spokesman said no formal diplomatic protest would be made, but that Andre Francois-Poincet, French Ambassador to Germany, might "draw the attentoin" of Baron Konstantin von Neurath, German foreign minister, to "possible consequences if the German press continued to mutilate official French statements."

British Cabinet May Meet.

London, July 11 (AP).—The non-intervention committee will be called in session in a few days, possibly on Wednesday, to again tackle the job of providing an effective patrol to keep arms and men from reaching either side in the Spanish civil war.

There was a possibility that the British cabinet would be called into session before the non-intervention committee to consider possibilities for compromise on the "hands-off-Spain" policy.

400 Rebels Reported Captured.

Madrid, July 11 (AP).—The Spanish government defense ministry reported tonight its troops had occupied the village of Villanueva del Pardillo, 15 miles west of Madrid, and captured 600 insurgent prisoners.

Insurgent advices received at Hendaye, on the Franco-Spanish frontier, said government troops had been defeated "everywhere" along the Madrid front with 4,000 government soldiers killed in fighting around Villanueva del Pardillo and Barrio Lucero.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. at the Mount Pleasant Church, for Arthur Wheeler, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wheeler, Silver Spring, Md., who was drowned Saturday at Caledonia State Park, Pa.

He attended Parkside School in Silver Spring. His father is a chemist with the Department of Agriculture and moved to Silver Spring a year ago from Clarendon, Va.

Separate Pacts In Indiana End Steel Walkout

C. I. O., Youngstown Sheet Sign Agreements With Gov. Townsend.

Governor Is Happy.

The Governor pointed out the Inland-C. I. O. agreements with him provided that the State labor division be final arbiter in cases of dispute, while the Youngstown-C. I. O. agreements with him contained no such clause.

The Governor, who has spent many days and nights in his efforts to iron out Indiana steel troubles, smiled broadly as he made the settlement announcement.

"I have every reason to be very happy over the settlement," he said. "The Youngstown officials told me they wanted to start work immediately. I had two alternatives—a settlement or troops."

The Governor explained that the agreement would be in effect pending hearings before the National Labor Relations Board. The board has been asked to decide whether signed contracts are necessary under the national labor act.

Bittner interrupted the Governor, saying, "This is a permanent agreement between the C. I. O. and the Youngstown company."

The Governor made no additional comment.

Bittner said strikers had kept up fires in the plants, and that work could start within the "next few hours."

The final agreement, the Governor said, had been proposed by Youngstown officials.

The Governor said the points of the agreement are as follows:

Accept Collective Bargaining.

"2. The company will meet and negotiate with the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, or its representatives, for the purpose of collective bargaining in behalf of the members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America, who are employed by the company.

"3. Maintenance of a wage rate in keeping with wages paid in the industry in the district where the company operates.

"4. Eight-hour day and 40-hour week, with time and a half for overtime.

"5. Vacations with pay for employes of over five years' service with the company. In view of the loss of wages due to cessation of work during 1937, the company will permit its employes to elect to receive the vacation pay instead of taking actual vacations this year.

"6. Promotion of safety and health.

"7. The company will not discriminate against any employes because of membership in any labor organization.

"8. The company recognizes the principle of seniority.

"9. Grievances will be negotiated and settled with employes through any labor organization to which they may belong or representatives of such organization."

Cleveland Plants to Reopen.

Cleveland, July 11 (AP).—Plans went forward today for reopening of several remaining strike-closed steel plants, while the Committee for Industrial Organization's suit to enjoin the use of National Guardsmen in Ohio strike territory neared a showdown in Federal District Court at Columbus.

Republic Steel Corporation announced it would call back tomorrow part of the 500 employes in its Canton, Ohio, tin plate division, and said 8,000 of its normal 9,900 employment in the Canton-Massillon district had returned to work. Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube officials in the Youngstown district asserted virtually all employes there had returned to their jobs; C. I. O. leaders, however, insisted the company figures must be discounted.

Republic units at Pittsburgh and Cumberland, Md., also were scheduled to reopen within a few days. Each plant employs a few hundred men.

Judge Mell G. Underwood will hear arguments tomorrow in the Columbus court on the State's motion to dismiss the C. I. O. suit against use of troops on the ground their presence violated the national labor relations act. Approximately 5,000 National Guardsmen were called into strike-affected districts by Gov. Martin L. Davey, first to give protection to nonstrikers and to see that closed plants did not reopen, and later to guard the reopening of closed mills. Many of the guardsmen have been withdrawn since the C. I. O. filed its suit June 28.

Court Reform By Constitution Nears Report

2 Bills for Amendment Slated to Reach Senate Today.

it to the Senate so that a vote may be had."

With Burke's view of the committee's probable action today, Wheeler agreed. The committee meeting is its regular Monday morning session.

The Senate, at noon, will proceed to its sixth day of debate on court reorganization. The opposition yesterday nominated Senators Bailey, of North Carolina, and O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, both Democrats, to carry the fight forward with set speeches today.

The jam of legislation behind the court bill, meanwhile, had reached such proportions as to cause predictions last night that once that bill is disposed of, it will be impossible to hold the legislators here for action on anything else.

Administration Bills Blocked.

Invocation by Administration supporters of Senate rules dusty from disuse has brought retaliatory refusal by the opposition to permit progress on any other legislation.

Hence, the Black-Connery wages and hours bill, the ever normal granary farm bill sought by the Administration, plugging of tax law loopholes, and even nonmilitary War Department appropriations, including $105,000,000 for flood control, are in grave peril.

It appeared likely an adjournment stampede, once the court bill is out of the way, would result in these and other measures going over to the next session.

A $25,000,000 flood control program for the lower Ohio Valley was scheduled to be the major subject of discussion in the House during the week.

The Senate-House committee inquiring into charges of tax dodging expects to receive tomorrow a list of Internal Revenue officials who have retired to private practice recently. There have been statements that some such experts used their knowledge to help tax avoiders.

The Senate Labor Committee also meets tomorrow to discuss the program of Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, for Government-aided housing.

Hunt for Slayer Of Woman Leads To Kidnap Case

Newark, N. J., July 11 (AP).—Police investigation of the slaying of a pretty blonde woman in a fashionable hotel last night led indirectly to a phase of the Government trial of Manning Strewl and seven other men held on charges growing out of the kidnapping of John J. O'Connell, jr., of Albany.

Deputy Police Chief John Haller said that in the clothing of a man discovered unconscious in the slain woman's room was found a receipt for a Newark traffic fine paid by an "Albert Handel."

Haller said detectives were checking to determine whether "Handel" was the Albert Handel, a resident of West New York, N. J., arrested by Department of Justice agents several weeks ago to become a witness in the kidnaping trial.

The slaying victim, about 35 years of age, and the man were unidentified three hours after discovery.

Col. R. T. Oliver, Dental Leader, 69, Dies Here

Former Army Corps Chief, President of American Association.

Col. Robert Todd Oliver, 69, former chief of the Army Dental Corps and later president of the American Dental Association, died yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital after a long illness, which a few days ago turned into pneumonia. He was a founder of the Army Dental Corps.

During the World War, Dr. Oliver was named chief of the American Expeditionary Force Dental Corps, and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal. In 1926 he was ordered to duty as professor of military science and tactics at Evans Institute, University of Pennsylvania. He served in that capacity until his retirement in 1932.

After volunteering in the Spanish-American War, he re-enlisted for services in the Philippines. Seeing the need for a corps of dentists for the Army in the field, he and two other dentists prevailing upon the War Department to hire them under contract. Thus was born the Dental Corps of today.

Col. Oliver devoted years to the task of organizing, developing and fighting for the recognition of the military dentists as regular officers.

With the entrance of the United States into the World War and at Gen. Pershing's personal request, Dr. Oliver (then a captain) was ordered to France among the first, as chief of the Dental Corps. France shortly awarded him the Legion of Honor decoration. The American decoration followed.

He was elected a fellow of the American College of Dentists in 1924.

Dr. Oliver was born in Indianapolis. He was a graduate of Butler College.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the Fort Myer Chapel, to be followed by interment at Arlington with full military honors.

Dr. Oliver is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anne Rockney Oliver, 1800 K street northwest; and a son, Capt. Robert Chaffee Oliver, on duty as a student at the Command and General School at Leavenworth, Kans.

Colored Group to Go To Chopawamsic, Va.

Approximately 100 underprivileged colored mothers and children will leave Garnet Patterson School, Tenth and U streets northwest, at 9 a. m. tomorrow for a two-week vacation at Camp Pleasant at Chopawamsic, Va.

The camp is one of two operated in the Chopawamsic recreational area by the Family Service Association. This will be the second contingent to go there for vacations this season.

Final health check-up examinations will be given all camp applicants by a group of volunteer physicians under the direction of Dr. Henry W. Freeman.

James Walker Post, 26, Selects Its Delegates

Officer Re-enlists.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 11.—Sergt. L. L. Waugh, in charge of the State police station here, re-enlisted yesterday in the service for his ninth 2-year term. He is one of the oldest members of the Department of Public Safety in point of service. He was stationed in southern West Virginia before being assigned to the local station.

Farm Bureau Meets.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 11.—The July meeting of the Charles County Farm Bureau, held at Waldorf, was addressed by C. E. Wise, secretary of the State farm bureau, who reported the work accomplished by the State federatoin. A report was made by the committee appointed on the drainage of Zekish Swamp.

Catholics Plan Rites Sunday to Honor Gibbons

K. of C. Sponsor Tribute to Cardinal on Anniversary of Birth.

The Nation's Catholics, through more than 50 local and national organizations, will pay tribute Sunday, under auspices of the Knights of Columbus, to the memory of James Cardinal Gibbons on the 103d anniversary of his birth.

Led by the Supreme Council, the ceremonies will take place before a statute of the Maryland prelate in front of the Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth street and Park Road, and which was accepted a few years ago in behalf of the United States Government by President Hoover.

Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, dean of Columbus University Law School, will be the principal speaker at the services. In his address, to be broadcast over a Nation-wide hookup, Dr. Fitzpatrick will review the achievements of the cardinal and make an appeal to Catholic employers to better the working conditions of their workers as the best means of offsetting communism in this country. He also will present the Catholic attitude toward the present labor strife.

Presiding at the services will be Walter I. Plant, State deputy of the Knights. Daniel J. Callahan, supreme treasurer, representing Martin H. Carmody, supreme knight, will present a wreath as a tribute from the national organization.

Among the national Catholic organizations participating in the services are Catholic Daughters of America, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Ladies Auxiliary, National Council of Catholic Men, National Council of Catholic Women, National Catholic School of Social Service, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae and the National Sodality of the Blessed Virgin.

Catholic Priest Convicted, Ousted For Miracle Fake

Vatican City, July 11 (AP).—The holy office last night convicted Raffaele Codipietro, parish priest of Paganico Sabine, Diocese of Rieti, of "sacrilege," and excommunicated him on charges of faking a miracle during a Communion service in his church July 26, 1936.

At the time Codipietro called the attention of his congregation to what were purported to be drops of blood issuing from Communion wafers, it was stated.

Prelates said the sentence meant the priest would be unfrocked, cast out of the church and, as a civilian, will be denied the Catholic marriage sacrament.

Minister, Suitor Of Girl Arrested

Monroe, La., July 11 (AP).—A minister was under arrest here today for living with a 15-year-old farm girl, and the girl's sweetheart was held for attempting to blackmail the preacher.

District Attorney Frank J. Hawthrone said the Rev. George A. Dierlamm, about 55, confessed the girl had lived with him for about a year. She left his home several weeks ago.

Since then, the district attorney said, Dierlamm claimed a man listed as Oscar Turnley, 28, truck driver, had attempted to extort $200 from him under a threat to expose the minister's relations with the girl. The minister served the Congregational Missions in Quichita and Jackson parishes.

Disabled Veterans To Get River Party

Crippled World War veterans will be tendered an all-day outing on the Potomac today by the American Legion, in co-operation with the local Red Cross.

About 235 will be transported in Red Cross cars, donated by local women, to the S. S. Potomac from Gallinger Hospital, and 100 more will leave Walter Reed Hospital for the day, many on crutches or in wheel chairs.

The legion auxiliary is to furnish refreshments, while the WPA has arranged to supply music for entertainment. Mrs. R. N. Harris is in charge of the Red Cross motor corps. Several nurses will accompany the patients.

Leaders Confer On Persecution Of Polish Jews

Rabbis to Meet Delegates of Fourteen States Here Today.

Washington's orthodox and conservative rabbis will meet today with 200 delegates from 14 States for an emergency conference on alleged Jewish persecution in Poland. The meeting is sponsored by the American Jewish Congress. Among leaders who will attend is Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the congress.

The conference will open at 10 a. m. at the Hotel Willard. A delegation will be elected to call on Secretary of State Hull at 11 a. m. to seek friendly intercession by the United States on behalf of Jews in Poland.

The delegation will present a memorandum stating the need of protecting "the lives, property and livelihood of the 3,150,000 Jews of Poland, jeopardized by systematic violence growing out of economic discrimination sanctioned and even initiated by the Polish government itself."

At the conference itself plans will be made for supplementary action. The congress considers the plight of Polish Jewry "the most desperate of any Jewish community in present-day Europe."

Former Policeman Ends Life in Garage

Samuel M. Anglin, 35, of 3801 Jocelyn street northwest, a former member of the Metropolitan Police Department, committed suicide yesterday morning. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a suicide certificate and, after examining the body, ascribed death to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Anglin was found unconscious in his taxicab in a garage back of 1321 Irving street northwest by Mrs. Florence Williams, of the Irving street address. Police said Anglin, who had been driving a taxi since his voluntary retirement from the police force, rented the garage about a week ago. He was pronounced dead by Dr. J. P. Smith, of Emergency Hospital.

Anglin joined the police force about 12 years ago, and during his 3 or 4 years' service worked in the police patrol signal system, and was noted for his accurate memory. Police could give no motive for the suicide.

A Long Way Out.

At last Washington can sink its teeth into something solid in grappling with the airport problem. The special commission appointed 14 months ago to select a site for a new municipal field has at last recommended Camp Springs, half an hour's drive southeast of the city. There a broad plateau offers ample landing space for even the largest planes, while its height above the river minimizes fog and mud hazards. While boasting these advantages, however, the location invites criticism on other counts. These are almost certain to be taken up with a clamor, the more so since it has taken so long to reach this unimpressive finding.

The principal protest will undoubtedly be directed against the distance of the proposed field from the city. Connections with the downtown area will take nearly half an hour longer than is the case with the present airport. The northwestern section of Washington, where the great bulk of local plane patrons presumably reside, will face an even longer journey.

To this, proponents of the Camp Springs site may reply that Washington has been spoiled in the matter of centrally located air-travel facilities. They will point to New York, London, Paris and other capitals which have located their airports well outside their limits without appreciably affecting commercial flying. But this is not an entirely adequate answer. Washington is not like other capitals. It has no ring of sprawling industries cluttering up its environs. It is a small, compact city built in a generally flat and unobstructed area. It seems unbelievable that a safe airport could not be more conveniently placed.

The fact that two members of the commission refused to sign the recommendation for the Camp Springs site encourages this view. They have held out for at least an auxiliary airport nearer the city. All Washington, and the many outsiders who regularly fly here, will hope that this minority view will receive full consideration in the debate the airport commission report is certain to stir up in Congress.

U. S. A. Vs. Germany.

By the conclusive victory of her splendid players over the strong Czechoslovak team Germany has won the European zone final in this year's Davis Cup competition. Von Cramm and Henkel thereby earn the right to meet the American team in the interzone final which starts at Wimbledon next Saturday.

While the victor of the German-American contest will play Great Britain in the challenge round a week later this match promises to be in the nature of an anti-climax. Fred Perry's relinquishment of amateur status has been followed by the withdrawal for reasons of health of George Patrick Hughes, Britain's standby in the doubles. This insures, barring miracles, that the coveted trophy will go either to Germany or to the United States. Since the Germans have never secured a world championship in tennis they may be expected to give their utmost next week-end. But the odds are against them.

If Great Britain loses the cup this year, it will be another instance of the periodic swing which seems to dominate national tennis fortunes. Perry and Austin together have kept the trophy in London for the past four years. Prior to that, largely due to the marvelous playing of LaCoste and Cochet, France held the championship for six years running. Prior to that again, from 1920-1926 inclusive, the Davis Cup rested in the country of its origin. The combination of Tilden and little Bill Johnston insured that.

International tennis supremacy has heretofore been largely a matter of producing two players of superlative merit simultaneously in a single country. Successively in the case of the United States, France and Great Britain such teams have maintained supremacy until they were broken by increasing age or other factors.

In Von Cramm and Henkel Germany has developed a pair of players who rank with any of the classic figures of the game. But these two stand head and shoulders above any of their countrymen. The United States, during the long years in which the cup has remained abroad, has made tennis proficiency more democratic. While Budge is outstanding at the moment, he is closely pushed by "Frankie" Parker, "Bitsy" Grant and Gene Mako, to mention only three of the most outstanding.

So the contest in London next Saturday will be between a country which has concentrated on building a two-man team of the old style, and one which has preferred to develop a galaxy of talent in which less reliance is placed on a single star. It is an interesting contrast in method, with applicability in a wider field than that of tennis superiority.

The Wages And Hours Bill.

Any plan for Federal regulation of wages and hours of work will inevitably encounter constitutional obstacles unless it is severely limited in scope.

The Black wages-and-hours bill, both in its original form and as rewritten by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, attempts to cover a great number of activities formerly regarded as intrastate in character by relating them to the regulation of interstate commerce. But the most liberal conceptions of the scope of interstate commerce cannot be stretched to include numerous labor groups, especially in the service industries, who are greatly in need of protection.

The bill now reported out of the Senate committee, for instance, specifically exempts employes of retail establishments from its provisions, presumably to meet constitutional objections. It is by no means clear, however, why this particular group should be singled out for mention when there are so many other occupations which could not possibly be brought within the orbit of a Federal regulatory system.

Apart from the constitutional doubts raised by a measure like the Black bill, there is an appalling administrative task in setting rates of pay and hours of work for a country of such great extent and diversified industrial interests as the United States. State laws alone can make proper allowance for local differences in labor standards and only State laws can afford protection for many classes of workers, in the service industries, which are greatly in exploitation.

However, the rewritten wages-and-hours bill now before the Senate has been radically changed for the better in many respects. The original measure was really a wage-fixing proposal, applicable not only to sweated trades but to all industries in which collective bargaining had not been effectively established. In deference, no doubt, to sharp criticism from both President Green of the A. F. of L. and Chairman Lewis of the C. I. O. the regulatory powers of the proposed Labor Standards Board have been limited to fixing wages and hours of work for the industries in which conditions are subnormal.

Even in these cases, the Senate committee has listened to critics who pointed to the danger of establishing rigid statutory minimum rates of pay and maximum hours of work. The bill merely provides that the minimum wage set shall not exceed 40 cents per hour while maximum weekly working periods shall not be reduced below 40 hours. The board may, however, at discretion set lower wages or decree longer hours. The committee was plainly impressed by the importance of avoiding any abrupt change in standards that might injure the national economy. Results must be achieved, it is stated in the bill itself, "cautiously, carefully and without disturbance and dislocation of business and industry."

Provision is also made for the establishment of advisory boards composed of representatives of employers, employes and the public, to make recommendations in advance of the issuance of orders by the proposed board. In this way it would be possible to enlist the co-operation of industry itself in plans for bringing about a realistic method of regulation that might mitigate the evils of too highly centralized control. But the extent of such co-operation would remain uncertain, especially as the board would be free to reject any recommendations made.

Even in its present form, therefore, the Black bill aims at placing in the hands of the Federal authorities extensive new powers over industry. And these might well be an entering wedge for further extension of powers. The issues involved are too important to be disposed of hastily at this stage of a crowded session. Action should be deferred until the public has had an opportunity to grasp the full extent and significance of the contemplated program.

The Helpless District.

District officials have set August 1 as the deadline beyond which bills will begin to go unpaid, unless authorization to borrow for emergency purposes is voted by Congress. With final action on the omnibus tax bill indefinitely delayed by the Senate debate on the court bill, some provision for tiding the District over the coming weeks is imperative. When the local tax bill was recently reported out by the District Committee the House deleted an authorization to borrow. In view of the serious character of the emergency, it is hoped that it will not again withhold needed relief.

A few days ago it was realized that delayed passage of the District appropriation bill has caused great inconvenience and suffering to the District's aged poor, who were forced to wait for their July 1 checks. Fortunately, the routine procedure of issuing and signing the necessary warrants was speeded up and the helpless pensioners soon put in funds. But in that incident the utter impotence of the local authorities in face of a pressing emergency was strikingly illustrated.

No matter what kind of tax measure is ultimately approved by Congress, funds will have to be found eventually for carrying on regular District activities and meeting current obligations. And any other municipal government not in a position of bondage to a superior authority, and not hopelessly bankrupt, would be able to arrange without difficulty for temporary advances to cover pressing necessities.

The particular combination of circumstances that has produced the present embarrassments may not recur soon again. It nonetheless emphasizes the need for a reform of the District's system of government that will securely emancipate it from the present intolerable state of helplessness.

Senator McCarran's Defiance.

Senator McCarran was not "seeing ghosts," as Senator Ashurst intimated, when he delivered his eloquent warning against the compromise court bill. Men of his stamp, with a reputation for orthodoxy to sustain, do not lightly defy party leadership and jeopardize their political futures merely for the fun of tilting at windmills.

And if the Nevadan's address was sometimes a little oratorical his audience knew that the emotionalism was deeply sincere, springing from the speaker's conviction that the new court bill, even as its predecessor, strikes at the basic principles of our form of constitutional government. "There is," he rightly said, "a philosophy which gave parental sanction to this bill, a rampant philosophy that is going the rounds of the country, which, if it moves with sufficient fury, will sweep this Government off its feet."

Senator McCarran made it clear that he was referring to the danger, by no means imaginary, that by constant enlargement of the executive power the United States may unwittingly go the way of those authoritarian states of Europe now ruled by dictators. Convinced that a real and immediate danger of usurpation of judicial independence is implicit in the court bill, he concludes that it is time to take an independent stand and refuse to "go along" with those who seek to make support of the bill a test of party loyalty.

The Senator from Nevada does not want to be read out of his party. He does not relish the prospect of having his State punished for his contumacy by the Administration's chief dispenser of patronage. Although he frankly admits all that, he is nonetheless ready to take the consequences of daring to act upon his independent judgment.

The arguments by which Mr. McCarran proves that the modified compromise measure is in principle no better than the original plan have been set forth equally well by others. But their repetition is most impressive when voiced by a Senator whose recognized loyalty to the President, whose habitual confidence in the latter's judgment, must in this instance suffer modification.

Mrs. Hugh Wallace.

The death of Mildred Fuller Wallace is a real loss to Washington. For she was one of the all-too-small group of residents deeply sensitive to and concerned for the fundamental traditions of the Capital.

To Mrs. Wallace, Washington was far more than a useful place to live in order to advance a career. It was her home. She was born the daughter of a Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. She married a man who preferred to live in Washington even after savoring the dignity of service as our Ambassador in Paris. Washington, to Mrs. Wallace, was not merely a collection of imposing Government buildings and perennial political argument. It was a friendly place of tranquil thought and fine companionships. It was her home and her demeanor and enthusiasms always reflected as much.

More than the fortunate circle of her many friends will henceforth miss the presence of Mrs. Wallace. Many and many an obscure Washingtonian looked to her for comfort and support. She was a woman who dedicated much of her life to helping others, and the list of her philanthropies runs long.

During the war she was particularly active at Walter Reed Hospital, an experience that qualified her well for social work when she later moved temporarily to war-torn France. But chief among her activities was her long and active interest in behalf of the Washington Home for Incurables. Here her gracious bearing, her unfailing sympathy, her democratic interests, all found scope. She was one who, having much to give, gave generously.

"It is true that Gypsy Rose Lee makes a lot of money, but what has she got to show for it?" asks an editor. Shucks, mister, how you do talk!

And you can learn about women from this: "At the opening service of Dr. W. A. McKeever's church for lovers in Oklahoma City, 156 people attended. Six were men; 150 were women."—News Item.

A Useful Reminder.

From the New York Times.

M. Chastenet, editor of the Paris Temps, warns us against the news from Europe which is flooded with propaganda. He says it is our duty to submit the transatlantic dispatches to the closest analysis in order to get at the truth. That is a very useful reminder, and not only as a safeguard against propaganda. It is a necessary precaution against ordinary human limitations.

News is not gathered by cherubim interviewing seraphim in a state of celestial calm. News is gathered by fallible human reporters describing the actions of other fallible and excited human beings. Not all the reports and denials, charges and countercharges that come every hour out of Spain or about Spain are the work of propaganda. Much of this confusion is unavoidable in reporting a chaos. Twenty years after the battle of the Marne the learned book writers will disagree about what happened there.

How can we expect the full truth while the guns are actually roaring?

The Filibusterers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In whose name are the filibusterers raising the cry of saving democracy? Surely not in the people's name. When a New Deal candidate pledged to court reorganization won overwhelmingly in a Texas Congressional by-election a few months ago, The Post quoted Senator Van Nuys as saying that of course the President's plan represented the popular side, but that they, the opponents of the court bill, were fighting for principle. Yes, they are fighting for principle, but the principle is not the principle of democracy, it is the principle of government by obstruction, "the power of resistance," which Justice Field frankly ascribed to the Supreme Court.

It is perfectly fitting that in fighting for this principle of the supreme filibuster, these people should resort to petty filibustering tactics in the Senate. But the method of fighting gives away the end for which they are fighting. And a patient people, who are now thoroughly aroused over the supreme filibuster, will sooner or later find ways of dealing with these little filibusterers.

Economy Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Mr. Roosevelt really wants to cut governmental expenses, and if he also wants to look out for the underdogs, he should insist that the economizing that he proposes take the form of a cut in salaries for the horde of so-called experts who were catapulted into $5,000 to $8,000 jobs at the beginning of the New Deal.

Many of these people could not command $1,800 per year in private life. They do not rate the fancy salaries that are being paid them. Many of them are being paid more for sociological experimenting at the taxpayers' expense than highly trained scientists in the older bureaus, such as the Patent Office, Bureau of Standards, etc.

However, it looks as though the little fellow will get it in the neck as usual, and that the economy ax will be wielded on people who will not know where to turn for the bare necessities of life if they are dismissed. MONITOR.

The Earhart Flight.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am sure many citizens agree with Mr. Nairn on the Earhart rescue. When she was asked why she was doing this ridiculous, worthless flight, she remarked, "Because I want to."

With all the need in the country to spend such an amount of money every day for this rescue is indeed nothing short of a crime and it's time it was protested.

EXASPERATED.
Washington, July 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We just don't know how to express our appreciation and gratitude to The Post for giving us nice, fine, wholesome Tom McCarthy. Just a look at his picture, which displays a fine, honest face, lifts me up! The poor old world needs more like him. We are sick and tired reading about murderers, divorces, birth control and all the other rot.

And we are not in sympathy with any woman leaving a fine husband, nor any man leaving a fine little wife just to gain glory for themselves in aviation. No, sir! We have heard the opinions of many and not one has expressed appreciation, praise or honor for this foolhardy selfishness. Poor husband, poor wife.

If Amelia Earhart and the navigator, Mr. Noonan, are facing death right now in some far away obscure little portion of the world; if there is the least bit of Christianity, humanity, love in their hearts they will be thinking, "Oh, God! Why did I leave my dear one for this empty glory." But it's too late for regrets now. Vanity, vanity, all is vanity.

MRS. R. F. TRUESDALE.
Washington, July 6.

Defense of NYA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It certainly must be a sad lack of public-mindedness and a loss of belief in democracy that prompts one to write a letter like the one entitled "A Russian Importation," published in The Post of July 8. In his letter Mr. Wilcox described the National Youth Administration" as a Russian importation which hastens the "proletarian revolution."

I wonder if Mr. Wilcox would dare to say this in front of the thousands of young Americans who were given a better chance in life by the splendid work of the NYA. Mr. Wilcox does not want the NYA left on our doorstep. Would he speak like that if he were among those thousands of American youths who were roaming across the country without any hope of seeing the improvement of their lot? Under such conditions, wouldn't Mr. Wilcox take advantage of the help given by the NYA?

If Mr. Wilcox does not know it, the NYA not only helped the mentioned underprivileged youths, but it is also making it possible for thousands of boys and girls to attend high school and college. However, these students do not receive their monthly $15 or $20 as a dole, but they earn that sum through working in the school library, by cleaning dormitory rooms, class rooms, and by keeping busy on various projects. Does work of this type teach social parasitism and does it destroy the enjoyment of work? As one of the thousands of college students benefited by the NYA, I know that it was that Government agency that made it possible for us to do some earnest work, after years of idleness which drove many of us into desperation.

If anybody thinks that it is un-American to aid the youth of the country, that person does not deserve to be looked upon as an American. Moreover, if the Communists really were those who suggested the creation of the NYA, and if Mr. Wilcox will prove that hypothesis of his, the writer of this letter will join the Communist Party. As to the hastening of the "proletarian revolution," Mr. Wilcox and his kind may thank their lucky stars that the progressive and constructive social measures of President Roosevelt prevented the breaking out of more violent protests against the intolerable conditions which existed before Mr. Roosevelt's election.

I am sure that I am voicing the conviction of thousands of young people when I say that this should be the slogan of every fair-minded person: "Continue and enlarge the work of the NYA for the security of America."

Mr. Wilcox should welcome an understanding, like the NYA, which prevents the coming of what many a Mr. Wilcox fears.

A COLLEGE STUDENT.

Repeal Of Section 213.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The nineteenth amendment undoubtedly prompted the action of the House in voting 203 to 129 for the bill repealing section 37a of Title 5, U. S. Code, better known as section 213 of the 1932 economy act. This law, apparently meant to apply equally to both sexes, fell most heavily on women, as 80 per cent of the persons dismissed in enforcing it were female employes.

The new act whereby not more than $4,000 annually shall be paid to a married couple is fair, and since Congress stipulates the remuneration for all higher bracket positions, the right to set the maximum compensation in this respect is a proper exercise of the legislative power. After all, when husband and wife are on Uncle Sam's pay roll, they are assured a steady income without any of the vicissitudes inherent to commercial employment.

So much for the economic side. However, there is the psychological aspect of such a modus vivendi to consider. Personally, it appears to me that matrimony being pre-eminently woman's career, if both partners must work for gain rather than the wife forego some of the luxuries she may no longer be able to have, then the chances of success in the sense of the family's spiritual welfare are diminished.

Moreover, it is hardly most men's nature to wish or encourage their wives to rub elbows with other men in the workaday world; nor do I think women should marry who prefer to hold on to their job, even at the sacrifice of domestic peace. Of course, you are saying that in such cases either many girls must remain single or live sinfully. This is not the point of issue, and a "state of sin" is not compatible with modern biological thought.

The yardstick with which to economize should never have been the marital status of anyone in the Federal service, and I am certain Congress has acted at last in the interest of all. Fitness and aptitude ought to be the primary requisites, and until employment is entirely based on these considerations, real economy and efficiency will not be achieved while half the public servants are civil service and the other half patronage appointees.

FIDES.
Washington, July 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nothwithstanding the action of the House in repealing the "marriage clause" of the 1932 economy act, there is no justifiable excuse for the employment of both husband and wife in the Government service. Under this arrangement the public service becomes essentially a family affair, to the discredit of the service as well as acting as a barrier to many capable persons who wish to enter the service.

When a man and a woman marry they are supposed in the natural order of things to establish a home, of which the man is the head. Where the wife becomes "boss" and is more concerned with getting a job in Government or elsewhere than in caring for the duties of the home, she ceases to be a wife in the true sense of the word.

Economic independence is ruining the American woman of the present day. This is manifest on every hand. Let those scoff who will, it is a fact, nevertheless. Marriage is fast proving a failure so far as the American woman is concerned. She is losing her desire to meet the responsibilities that nature has imposed upon her. Birth control has no better ally than the woman who prefers employment outside the home to the duties of a wife and mother. This, too, regardless of what may be said or done.

Washington A Model.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed that string of policemen's pictures in your paper. If the changes are on the up and up, it's a very good move.

You people in Washington are liable to forget that you have to set everybody an example. I am from out West, and never saw Washington until this spring. I was very much impressed, but didn't know you had anything going on like that.

Now maybe after this clean-up the President will get a wire from the Mayor of Youngstown or somewhere asking for a clean-up in his place. ROBERT G. WULFF.

Any Others?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few years ago when The Post used the honor system of selling their papers on the street, I took a few of them without paying, then sensing the wrong and that I was a thief, I put money in the box to pay for what I had at different times taken. I am not sure this fully paid for them, so am enclosing a money order for 50 cents which I am confident far more than pays for what I did take without paying.

I have repented of the theft, and can not see that publication of my name would serve any good purpose, so I am.

Ducks For Tomorrow?

Following are extracts from a letter sent to the National Association of Audubon Societies by a sportsman.

"THE writer spent three weeks duck hunting on the Eastern Shore of Maryland during late November and December of 1936. It quickly became apparent that unless one had connections, and could be vouched for, very little of what went on could be seen. The activities of the Biological Survey men have been such as to make the natives take precautions.

"A friend of mine felt sure that A (a State district game warden) could suggest some possibilities. I found Mr. A. He seemed rather vague about guides and places to shoot, but he said he would see what he could do. That evening I found that he had stopped and left a slip with names, B, C, D, and E. It appeared quite obvious that he had not been willing to give these to me until he had checked up.

"The next morning I went out to see Mr. B, but found him away. He appears to keep several guides employed all season, and we talked to one of these. He said Mr. B owned a lot of marsh and had six blinds. He also said they charged $10 a day, but would guarantee the limit. He said the shooting had been spotty, some days good and some not so good, but that they kept plenty of ducks on hand to make up the balance, as many rich sportsmen came there and kicked if they paid $10 and didn't have the limit to take home.

"Saturday, we got down to C's at about 7, taking with us wooden decoys, of which I had five in front of my blind. About 3:30 or 4 C came around to the blind and said that the best shooting was after 4, so we shot until almost 6, getting most of our ducks after 4 o'clock. When we got together at dark we had 2 green-winged teal and 25 black ducks among us, but none of us had shot more than 10. I myself had got 9 and my friend 8, and C 10.

"The pond in front of my blind had been baited, and I could see some of the corn in the water. It was this corn, apparently, that drew the ducks over the refuge, where they were concentrated. C said he always baited late in the evening, and didn't put much down, so by the time any wardens came around the next day it would be all eaten up, but the ducks would still remember the place.

"On Wednesday I went down to C's again. This time, being alone, I could talk a little more freely. When I got there I found two others from ——, who were also going along. It was a cold morning and the pond seemed pretty well frozen.

"There must have been a thousand black ducks sitting on the ice, so we agreed to go back to —— and walk across the marsh to it. It was a tough trip, but we finally got out, leaving the fellows from —— at a smaller pond with a blind, that we passed on the way. After putting out clumps of grass sod to decoy the ducks, and getting back into the blind, we had good shooting. C was using a 6-shot gun, and between us we got 44 ducks. I asked C about the matter of exceeding the limit, and he said, 'When you get 'em flying, you keep on shooting until you are out of shells.'

"When we got back we found we had 51 ducks in the crowd. I said I only needed 6, so the two men took 22 between them, and C kept the rest, as he said he was short on account of the cold weather and needed some extra for customers. He told me they were getting $1 to $1.25 a pair, and were shipping them out by a private car. He told me the Federal men had gotten wise to their shipments by oyster trucks, and searched the barrels on the ferry. He said his all went to regular customers, most of them being private individuals and clubs.

The next morning I went out and found a fellow named E, who said he had a blind and could give me some good shooting. He went with me to a blind on a pond in the marsh, but it was cold and sleeting and the ducks were all out of range and didn't pay any attention to our wooden decoys. E had an automatic shotgun, with the plug taken out and in his pocket. He said he had done some baiting, and if the weather wasn't so bad the ducks would have come in to feed. I tried to see if I could buy any ducks from him to take with me, but had no luck.

"Tuesday morning I got down to —— at about 7:15, and met the guide. The tide was still pretty high, but we started out to the blind with some wooden duck and goose decoys. No birds came in to us, and the guide said the tide was so high we wouldn't get anything without live decoys. I asked him what was keeping us from using them, and he said only the matter of going back and getting them, and he started back for them.

"Having another day's shooting coming, I went out the following day. Again we had high tide, and I only got one black duck, although this time we had two live decoys with us. As I had been guaranteed the limit by B for my $10, I demanded it, but the guide said the high tide had covered the traps and they didn't have any on hand."

Writes of Hitch-Hiking Tour

Night In A Kansas Wheatfield.

WILLIAMSBURG, KANS., July 12.—It is not a good idea to walk through Kansas without a hat. There aren't many shade trees along the road out of Kansas City, and as you progress West, there aren't any. So, as I scuffed through the dust of the roadside, I literally mourned my battered felt.

TOM McCARTHY.

I couldn't get a hat, because, as I entered Kansas, I had only 50 cents. I hiked into Gardner. I wanted only a shady lawn and a place to rest.

Given a ride out of Gardner, bound for the wheat country around Emporia, I was in no mood for spirited conversation. That fact left my driver unperturbed. My silence was his advantage, and he utilized it. A glib Kansan, and proud of his State, he had spent some time in the East, employed as a salesman. With an Easterner as his audience, he set forth on a running commentary, in which he asked the questions and supplied the answers.

• • • •

"THESE TOWNS we're passing through," his wave embraced the countryside, presumably including Gardner, Baldwin City, Edgerton and Norwood, "they don't look like your idea of Kansas, do they?"

"No, sir," he went on, without pausing for an answer, "you're probably surprised to find these little towns in Kansas. Green lawns, shady trees, newly painted houses: they probably don't fit into the picture you've had of our State. A lot of Easterners think we live in a desert. These towns would surprise them. Did you ever stop to think what supports these towns?"

I told him I hadn't thought about it.

"Retired farmers!" he exclaimed triumphantly. "Retired farmers! Look where you want to, and you'll find no industry. They aren't merchants. There aren't a dozen stores in the town. How do they live? Why, they just sit on their front porches, and live off the money they cleaned up in the boom wheat years of wartime.

"Look where you want to," he advised, "and you'll find only the very old and the youngsters. The old folks don't work, because they've made enough to live on. The young folks don't work, because the farms have been sold and they can live off their parents."

• • • •

"THE WHEAT crop of 1918!" he went on. "That's what did it. But we're going to have a real wheat crop this year. It won't make us rich, but it'll bring us out of the red! It'll put us back on our feet!

"And, then, if we have some rain—boy, if we have some rain—we'll have a corn crop to knock your eye out! That is, if the grasshoppers don't get it first.

"Speaking of grasshoppers, you'll enjoy this. You're from Washington, aren't you? Yes, I thought you said you were. Well, Washington has been helping us to fight the grasshoppers. What a laugh! They give the farmers bran mash and arsenic to kill off the grasshoppers. They're supposed to mix it up and put it around the corn. But you can't fool a Kansas farmer, or make him do what he doesn't want to do. The farmers are afraid that the mash and poison will kill off the birds and chickens, and so they get the free bran and feed it to the cattle. And they get the free arsenic and put it on the potato plants. The taxpayer pays for it!"

As he let me out, in front of the courthouse in Ottawa, he waved toward it and ended on a personal note, "And that's where I got my dee,vorce."

• • • •

I TALKED with loungers in the main street of Ottawa about the possibilities of getting a job in the wheat harvest. They were all sure that jobs were to be had, but they couldn't say where. They, too, reflected my garrulous acquaintance's optimism about the wheat crop and his fear of the effect of grasshoppers on the corn. However, I couldn't find anybody to verify his story about the farmers' disposition of Government bran and arsenic. The Government is now distributing a mixture of poison and sawdust, which can only be used for extermination purposes.

I received a short ride out of Ottawa and was deposited in the road, as the farmer turned into a lane to go to his home. I was in the widst of real wheat country. For miles about, stretching toward startlingly distant horizons, the golden wheat flared into bronze and red beneath the crimson wash of a setting sun. It was along the road that I had my first intimate contact with Kansas wheat. I slept in it!

Five miles from Williamsburg, the nearest town of any size, and with 19 cents in my pocket, I had the problem of finding a place to sleep.

I walked along for a while in the dark. It was a fine night, with the kind of a sky which made you understand Omar's simile about the "bowl of night."

• • • •

A FIELD of shocked wheat offered a bed, so I climbed the fence and dropped to the stubbled ground. Preparing sleeping quarters was easy. Three sheaves of wheat, pulled from the shock and placed along the ground, did the trick. One sheaf offered a head rest and the other two acted as a mattress.

As I lay there in the wheat, I could hear voices from a farmhouse nearly a half mile down the road. Lights from far-away automobiles were thrown into the sky by slight elevations of the otherwise table-flat road. From horizon to horizon, the great arc of night hung heavy with its burden of stars.

Small insects stirred in the wheat and clustered straw released by a sudden turning of my body sprang free with a noise which came to my uninitiated ear as loudly as the snapping of a twig.

Suddenly, something, undeniably alive and terrifyingly animated, came from somewhere and landed on my face. I was on my feet before I had time to gasp.

I lit some matches and examined my bed of raincoat and wheat sheaves. There was nothing there.

After a while I forgot whatever it was that had made a three-point landing on my face, and I slept.

• • • •

THE NEXT morning in Williamsburg, I entered a restaurant with the bright expectancy of 19 cents' worth of breakfast. Before the waitress had time to set the coffee before me, I had discovered that I was virtually a bankrupt. During the night, 15 of my 19 cents had disappeared. Probably the dime and the nickel had rolled from my pocket while I slept in the wheatfield.

The waitress canceled the order for the toast and the doughnut, but allowed me to have the coffee for 4 cents.

Quite literally, I was adrift in Kansas on a cup of coffee.

At the Century of Progress in Chicago, individuals glanced as they passed at the "Nude Descending the Staircase," remembering with faint interest how it startled the world some years ago. June In France

Month Brought Overthrow Of Blum With Chautemps From Senate Taking Over Premier Role; Victory For Democracy.

By Jacques Kayser.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

THE MONTH of June was notable in France for a ministerial crisis which was quickly surmounted. But this circumstance does not minimize its really far-reaching importance.

The cabinet of Leon Blum handed in its resignation in order to avoid a grave constitutional crisis. Although in command of a majority of 99 votes in the Chamber of Deputies, which is selected by universal suffrage, it was not able to obtain the approval of the Senate, which is elected indirectly. The disagreement between the two houses, whose accord is indispensable for the passage of any laws, could only be straightened out by the resignation of the Government, by the surrender of the Senate, or by the dissolution of the Chamber and the holding of new elections.

This last solution was rejected because, the existing financial and international situations facing the country, being what they are, the turmoil of a political campaign lasting a month could only further weaken the French republic.

The second solution—the capitulation of the Senate—could occur only after several weeks of conflict also certain to weaken France. Besides, the only government which since 1870 has tried to fight the Senate—the cabinet of Leon Bourgeois in 1896—was finally compelled to admit its defeat in spite of the support it received from the Chamber of Deputies. The same result might have occurred at this time if Blum had tried to fight it out with the Senate.

Resignation of Blum Only Feasible Alternative.

THUS there remained only the first solution. It was the one which was adopted by the government. Premier Blum perferred to retire and throw his support to a new government, which, practically speaking, was the same which had been overthrown but which had a better chance of overcoming the resistance of the Senate. That is why he facilitated the formation of the Chautemps cabinet in which he personally agreed to participate.

Chautemps does not belong to the same party as does Blum. The Blum cabinet was a cabinet of the Popular Front headed by a Socialist. The Chautemps cabinet is a Popular Front cabinet headed by a Radical Socialist, that is to say, by a member of a party more moderate and more bourgeois than is the Socialist Party.

Because of his membership in the Radical Socialist Party and also because he is a senator, Chautemps is in a position to conciliate both houses of Parliament. If the Socialist Party can count on more than 140 Deputies out of around 600 in the Chamber, it only possesses around 15 seats in the Senate, out of more than 300. On the other hand, the Radical Socialist Party, which has only 115 Deputies in the Chamber, is represented in the Senate by approximately 90 Senators. Thus the Senate which had turned down M. Blum when he had asked for extraordinary financial powers, gave way very quickly to his successor.

Hostility of Senate Rose from Three Sources.

THE HOSTILITY of the Senate to the Blum regime stemmed from three facts. First of all, the government had refused to indicate specifically how it would utilize its extraordinary powers. The Senate, as one of its members declared, "does not delegate its powers in the dark." The conservatives, who make up the majority of the Senate, the average age of whose members is 65, feared that Leon Blum would make use of these powers to carry out an effective Socialist policy.

Thus, his overthrow came because the Senate had no confidence in Blum and because it judged his social policy to be "catastrophic," particularly with regard to the application of the 40-hour law. When one Senator was reproached with having pursued a contradictory course, since he had voted for that law in June, 1936, but was fearful of its application, he replied, "I did not think that the law would be applied as speedily as it was." And the Senate has felt itself more and more ill at ease in having to deal with a regime of a kind which has never before held power in France. That necessitated an unwelcome change in its habit and has, therefore, been resisted.

The immediate occasion for the fall of the Blum government was the mounting financial crisis. It is, in fact, the sixteenth time since the end of the war that a French government has fallen because of a financial problem. Poincare, Herriot, Tardieu and Caillaux have been among the victims. And one can say that these successive debacles have always had the same cause—the impossibility of balancing the budget—primarily because of the considerable increase in the national debt. Ordinary expenses of the government constitute about a third of the budget. The cost of national defense is responsible for another third. The rest is absorbed by the service of the public debt and of the floating debt.

Overthrow Of Cabinet Might Have Brought Riots.

BEFORE the overthrow of the Blum government, it was possible to believe that such a development would be followed by violent manifestations in the streets, that the "workers" would register their disapproval of the departure of their chief from power. Well, the French have given an example of calm and discipline which has been a surprise to observers. Under the inspiration of the Popular Front, more than 100,000 Parisians did stage a demonstration in the east end of Paris and listened in silence to the speeches and slogans of their chiefs. These slogans were: "Maintain your discipline, the Popular Front continues! The social laws will be respected!"

There was no trouble of any kind, no disorder. The organization of Fascist tendencies made no effort to demonstrate. They had suffered very serious defeat in various by-elections. Several days before, in a quarter of Paris, where, up to then, the majority was invariably Rightist, a local election resulted in a majority for the Left candidate. Col. de la Rocque and M. Jacques Doriot, who are otherwise rivals, showed themselves to be opportunists. They are watching to see which way the wind is blowing.

As for the Socialists, despite their resentment, they responded gallantly to the appeal of their chief. If Leon Blum had not agreed to participate personally in the Chautemps government and consequently to support him, there is every reason to believe that the Socialists would have gone on the warpath, even while the Communists favored conciliation.

The major fact that has emerged from the crisis is that from a purely political point of view the Popular Front majority remains intact. Several days ago, while passing Leon Blum in the vicinity of the premier's residence, Camille Chautemps said to him, laughingly, "In you, I greet my predecessor—and my successor." This formula gives the impression of continuity which is characteristic of French politics today, despite the recent crisis.

Need For Housecleaning Lies Behind All Politics.

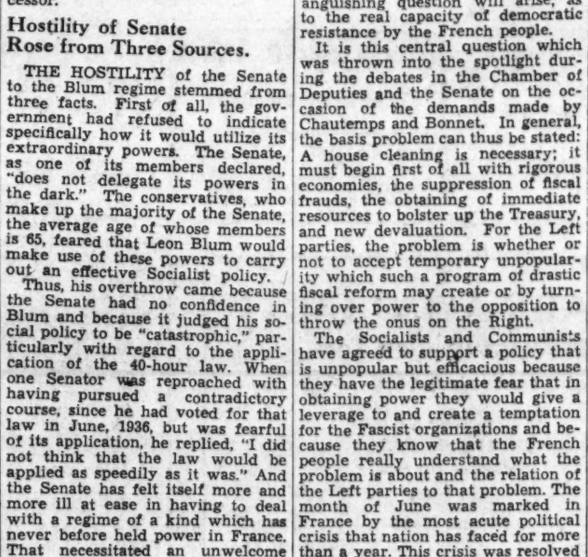

BUT side by side with the political problem there is also a more fundamental problem. And this latter will not be so easily straightened out if the financial crisis is prolonged. Then in that case the anguishing question will arise, as to the real capacity of democratic resistance by the French people.

It is this central question which was thrown into the spotlight during the debates in the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate on the occasion of the demands made by Chautemps and Bonnet. In general, the basis problem can thus be stated: A house cleaning is necessary; it must begin first of all with rigorous economies, the suppression of fiscal frauds, the obtaining of immediate resources to bolster up the Treasury, and new devaluation. For the Left parties, the problem is whether or not to accept temporary unpopularity which such a program of drastic fiscal reform may create or by turning over power to the opposition to throw the onus on the Right.

The Socialists and Communists have agreed to support a policy that is unpopular but efficacious because they have the legitimate fear that in obtaining power they would give a leverage to and create a temptation for the Fascist organizations and because they know that the French people really understand what the problem is about and the relation of the Left parties to that problem. The month of June was marked in France by the most acute political crisis that nation has faced for more than a year. This crisis was resolved on the political plane by the maintenance of a coalition supported by the majority of votes even if the brutal exigencies of the financial situation have compelled measures constructive to the aspirations of the nation. Despite temptations to follow the paths of autarchy and authoritarianism, France remains devoted to the ideals of liberty and of democracy.

Another Judea?

By Bertram Benedict

New Chapter For Palestine.

The British government has moved military and naval re-enforcements to Palestine to prevent disorders as a result of the royal commission report on Palestine. The report recommends that Palestine be divided into two independent states—one along the sea, more fertile, for the Jews; and an inland one, larger and with access to the sea, for the Arabs. A small piece of territory around Jerusalem, including Nazareth and Bethlehem, would remain under British mandate.

Few lands have seen as many rules as Palestine, especially lands so undesirable from the viewpoint of fertility. The name means the land of the Philistines, and is so used in several places in the Bible.

When the ancient Jews occupied the territory, it was the land of the Canaanites. After several centuries of Jewish rule, Palestine fell to the Assyrians and Babylonians, then to Persia. It became part of the Macedonian conquest, and ultimately went under the Roman Empire, going to Constantinople when the empire split.

• • • •

IN THE seventh century A. D. Palestine fell before the spread of Islam. By that time practically all the Jews had departed, voluntarily or involuntarily. The Jews in Palestine today represent almost entirely an immigration of the last 50 years.

A Christian kingdom was established in Palestine during the Crusades, but thereafter Turkey held control until 1917. Napoleon had proposed that Palestine be erected into a homeland for the Jews, but the proposal awakened no interest. The Zionist movement developed toward the end of the nineteenth century, stimulated by pogroms and persecutions of Jews in Russia and elsewhere. Today the present unhappy plight of Jews in almost all parts of Europe has lent particular point to the movement for an independent Jewish state.

Until the Zionist movement took on strength, the Jews and Arabs in Palestine got along in relative amity. The Arabs were in so great a numerical majority that they had little fear of a Jewish movement. Today Arabs, still in a majority, have seen it reduced by Jewish immigration. It must be remembered that Palestine and Jerusalem are as holy to the Arabs as to the Jews.

• • • •

DURING THE World War Great Britain, as part of the campaign to protect the Suez Canal, moved against Turkey in Arabia, and ultimately Jerusalem was captured by Gen. Allenby. The British were not insensible to the advantage of enlisting the moral support of Jews all over the world, and on November 2, 1917, Foreign Minister Balfour made the following declaration:

His Majesty's government views with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use its best endeavor to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country.

• • • •

THE BALFOUR DECLARATION was approved by President Wilson, and its principle was unanimously indorsed by the Congress of the United States in 1922. Great Britain was given a mandate over Palestine in 1920 in order to erect a Jewish homeland there, and in 1922 the mandate was confirmed by the League. In 1927 the Jewish population was given a large measure of autonomy, which, however, did not extend to taxation.

The mandate has caused much trouble, because of serious outbreaks between the Arabs and the Jews. For Great Britain now to surrender the mandate, the approval of the League of Nations is needed. It will be the second time that London will have surrendered a mandate—in 1927 Great Britain recognized Iraq (Mesopotamia) as independent, and in 1932 the British mandate was officially terminated.

Question And Answer Department.

Sir—I am a taxi driver. The other day two strangers jumped aboard, threw me out and claimed they had a right to drive the taxi at higher rates. I have appealed to the Governor of my State. What are my chances? SUSPENSE.

A.—The chances are the militia will be ordered out to keep you off the street.

• • • •

Ed.—I am sorely puzzled. As a pedestrian I assume I have the right to cross a street safely on a green light. That is the law. But every time I try to cross, a lot of truck drivers, crossing against the red, chase me up a telegraph pole. What should I do? GIDEON.

A.—Appeal to the State or Federal officials. They will issue an order suspending all street traffic.

• • • •

Sir—I live in a two-family house. The man upstairs keeps chopping holes in the ceiling and dropping flatirons, stove lids, etc., down on my head. I had been raised to believe that a man's home was his castle and I remonstrated, but he kept doing it. He insisted he had a mandate or something. Do you know what happened when I called the police? WEEMS.

A.—Of course we know what happened. The police settled everything by forbidding you to enter the house. You are now in the doghouse.

• • • •

Sir—I am a flagpole sitter. Yesterday some fellow I never saw before sawed off the flagpole at the base while I was at the top. I fell 15 stories and landed on an iron fence. I appealed to the authorities. Presently six companies of militia showed up with orders to abolish flagpoles. Is this right? CHET.

A.—No. But who cares?

• • • •

Ed.—My husband beats me unmercifully. Last week he threw me through a closed window, using the overhand delivery. As appeals to the State authorities had never done any good, I complained to Washington. A board of mediation investigated and settled everything by an order removing the sash and glass from all windows. What should I do. A WIFE.

A.—This is a difficult problem. You might ask to have the militia sent to take up a position outside your house and hold a net.

Senate Invokes Rigid Rules to Get Court Vote

Emergency Measures Are Adopted as Administration Seeks Showdown.

By the Associated Press.

Administration's efforts to force the court bill to a vote have called into play Senate rules which are used only during times of stress and strain.

In ordinary times, the Senate works almost without rules. Virtually all its business is done by unanimous agreement. Even decisions to end debate and vote are reached by such agreements.

Under this procedure, a Senator can talk on anything at any time, for as long as he chooses. No curb can be placed upon him without his consent.

All this suddenly changes, however, whenever the Senate runs into a filibuster, or leaders fear a filibuster. Such has been the case during the court debate.

Filibuster Technique.

When filibustering, opponents of a measure try by every means available to prolong debate and prevent a vote. Supporters of the bill try to curb debate and force a vote.

Under the Senate's liberal debate rules, it is difficult to curb debate. It can be done only in two ways—either by wearing opponents out physically or by invoking rarely used cloture rule.

This rule, which requires a two-thirds vote and is, therefore, unlikely to be called into play in the present controversy because of the size of the opposition, quickly forces a vote.

The other method of breaking a filibuster is a pure test of physical endurance and parliamentary skill. Then the rarely used rules, some of which have already been invoked in the current fight, are utilized.

Game's Fine Points.

Under them a speaker may speak on a given subject only twice in a day. If he yields to a colleague for anything more than a question, it counts as another speech for him. To limit the speeches, leaders in charge of the bill recess the Senate at night instead of adjourning. This merges all the debate into a single "legislative day" and prevents the filibustering group from making two more speeches each succeeding calendar day.

To meet this strategy, the opposition can then propose amendments to the bill. On each amendment they can speak twice. If this becomes an obvious filibustering tactic, friends of the bill can then move to table the amendments, which ends debate on them.

When filibustering tactics are being used, questions sometimes take queer form. Co-operating Senators seek to interrupt the speaker as long as possible to prolong his speech and to give his voice a rest.

Lion Eats Lunch, Then Takes Stroll In Trenton Street

Trenton, N. J., July 11 (AP).—Sweltering residents, seeking relief from the heat out of doors, were amazed early today to see a lion lope down the street.

Sleepy eyes stared and blinked. Fanning groups became alert. More courageous dwellers followed the animal at a "safe" distance. More discreet spectators summoned police and firemen.

Freshest among the pursuers was William Carl Schulz, owner and trainer of the lion. Five minutes after the animal left its cage on a nearby circus lot, a nervous but admiring gallery watched its trainer coax the animal within arm's length and capture Leo with a firm mane grip. Police said Schulz told them the lion wandered away after having a midnight lunch following the final performance of a show.

Dentists Will Discuss Tooth Decay 'Warner'

Atlantic City, N. J., July 11 (AP).—A new preparation which gives warning when a tooth is about to begin to decay and which, applied to the tooth, prevents such decay, will be described at the seventy-ninth annual convention of the American Dental Association opening tomorrow.

Dr. James M. Prime, of Omaha, Nebr., will tell of the decay "warner" at one of the group sessions. Dr. Leroy M. S. Miner, of Boston, association president, predicts an attendance of more than 15,000 dentists.

Film Folk Rally to Aid Jailed 'Garbo of Golf'

Los Angeles, July 11 (AP).—Film friends rallied to the support of John Montague, the "Garbo of golf," today as he awaited an extradition hearing on an Essex County, N. Y., indictment charging him with a $700 robbery in 1930.

Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz said Montague had agreed to appear voluntarily Tuesday night at a police showup, where he will be scrutized by victims of recent jewel robberies. Bing Crosby, screen singer, beaten in a golf match by Montague, who used a baseball bat, shovel and rake, declared his movie colony friends were "all back of him 100 per cent."

Wreck on N. J. Central Ties Up 2 Other Roads

Bound Brook, N. J., July 11 (AP).—Ten cars of a speeding Central Railroad of New Jersey freight train derailed near the Bound Brook station last night, tying up trains of the Baltimore and Ohio, and the Reading railroads, which operate on the line.

The 53-car train from Jersey City, headed toward Rutherford, Pa., came apart near the middle. The locomotive and half the cars stopped 500 feet farther as the cars in the rear telescoped and blanketed all four tracks with splintered wood and steel.

Filene Board Asks More Aid for Aged

New York, July 11 (U.P.).—The Twentieth Century Fund, presenting the results of 15 months of research by its committee on old-age security, has recommended the existing social security act be altered to provide more generous old-age pensions.

The Twentieth Century Fund was established in 1919 by Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant.

The committee proposed the Government should pay bigger Federal benefits, begin paying them in 1939 rather than 1942, pay them to more persons, ultimately decrease the worker's share of the cost, and abandon the old-age reserve pension fund method of financing and proceed on a pay-as-you-go basis with only a small contingency reserve.

Ickes Attacks Bill to Restrict Sugar Quotas

Jones Measure Discriminates Against Islands, Says Secretary.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Interior Ickes said yesterday the Federal Government "would be acting in an extremely imperialistic manner," if it adopted a pending sugar bill designed to restrict quotas of off-shore producing areas.

Ickes referred to legislation proferred by Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee. A few days ago James Roosevelt, son of the President and a White House secretary, was reported to have criticized the measure on the ground it would discriminate against Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Cuba.

Jones drafted his bill as a "compromise" after objection had been raised to an earlier off-shore quota measure.

In a statement yesterday, Ickes said:

"It has been reported recently the sugar bill, H. R. 7667, is a compromise measure which meets the views of the Administration. This propaganda has no foundation in fact and a consideration of the effects of the discrimination which this bill contains against the American citizens of Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands should make it obvious the Government of the United States would be disregarding its public trust if such legislation were adopted . . .

"It would also mean the setting up of trade barriers within the United States which would be contrary to the long-established principle of guaranteeing each part of our country the right to exchange its products freely with all other domestic areas."

The State, Agriculture and Interior departments propose that Hawaii and Puerto Rico be permitted to send their entire quotas of 938,000 and 798,000 short tons into the United States. Jones would limit Hawaii to 29,616 and Puerto Rico to 126,000 tons.

Pacific Clippers Fly 1,000,000 Miles

San Francisco, July 11 (AP).—Transpacific Clipper planes droned serenely tonight toward a long-sought goal—1,000,000 miles of service flying over the widest ocean without an accident.

Pan-American Airways announced their four big sea-spanning planes would complete the 1,000,000th mile of commercial operation between California and the Orient with the arrival tomorrow of the Philippine Clipper in Manila.

Dr. Jardine Talks to 77 But Not About Windsor

Atlantic City N. J., July 11 (AP).—While thousands strolled the boardwalk almost within sound of his voice, the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, who defied the Church of England to unite the world's most famous lovers of modern times, made his first address on American soil last night.

"I have not come to fill my pockets, but the pockets of your favorite charities," he told 77 perspiring listeners, who braved the warm weather to hear about the Duke of Windsor and his American duchess. But Dr. Jardine soon set these 77 aright. Such topics as "brotherhood" and not the royal wedding are to be the themes of his American addresses, he declared.

U. S. Will Study Strife Remedy For Ship Labor

Wide Hearings Scheduled to Determine Fair Work Standards.

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission is formulating two programs to eliminate labor disputes from the American shipping industry, officials said yesterday.

First, the commission is making an investigation preparatory to establishment of wage, hour and working standards for the industry.

A series of hearings will be held at cities on all costs to records the views of both management and labor. The first of these is set for Tuesday in New York.

When hearings are concluded in August, the commission will prescribe standards it considers fair to the operator and seamen. These standards, officials said, should eliminate strife over minimum working conditions.

Not Binding on Labor.

They added that the maritime law does not compel labor to accept the standards, but the commission may intervene in any dispute between operators and seamen over working conditions.

In addition, they said, if maritime labor were dissatisfied, it could ask the commission to revise the standards rather than resort to a strike.

United States to Train Seamen.

Under the law, shipping companies receive subsidies to make up the difference between the wages they pay and those paid by foreign operators. Most increases in wages, therefore, will be borne by the Government.

As another step to minimize management-labor differences, the commission is working out plans for training seamen in co-operation with the Coast Guard.

Rep. Wene to Run For N. J. Governor

Atlantic City, N. J., July 11 (AP).—A bombshell was exploded in New Jersey Democratic ranks when Charles I. Lafferty, Atlantic County Democratic leader, announced the candidacy of Representative Elmer H. Wene on a New Deal-labor platform against United States Senator A. Harry Moore for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Moore has been an opponent of the New Deal policies of the President.

5-State Pageant Opens Tomorrow

New York, July 11 (AP).—America's pioneers will be commemorated here this week in elaborate pageantry. The occasion will mark the 159th anniversary of the passage of the ordinance of 1787, providing for creation of the Northwest Territory, out of which came five States and part of a sixth.

The public ceremonies will open at 3 p. m., Tuesday with a message from President Roosevelt.

11.2 Degrees of Fever Highest Ever Recorded

New York, July 11 (AP).—Daniel Long, 66-year-old resident of the Municipal Lodging House, apparently did not feel the difference when the temperature here fell from the nieties to 87 this afternoon.

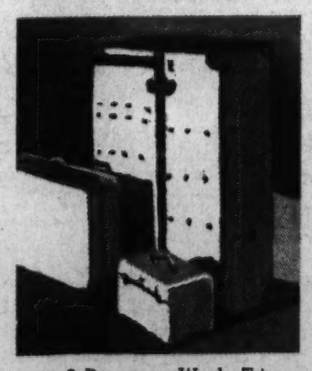

Taken to Bellevue Hospital, he was found to have a temperature of 109.8 degrees, the highest ever recorded in a human body there. Buckets of ice, water and oxygen forced his temperature down to a normal 98.6.

Foresters' Group Backs Rocky Mountain Tunnel

Construction of the Rocky Mountain tunnel in Colorado yesterday was assured support of the Society of American Foresters here by H. H. Chapman, president. The tunnel, known officially as the Colorado-Big Thompson project, is to be 13 miles long beneath the Continental Divide of the Rocky Mountain National Park, and will be used for power as well as irrigation. It has been subject to wide criticism, because of the fear that it will cause commercial desecration of the park.

Roosevelt Note On Farm Views ExpectedToday

Capitol Hill Believes It Will Embody Wallace Proposals.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt may send to Capitol Hill today a letter disclosing his views on farm legislation, informed legislators said yesterday.

Although the contents of the letter have not been made public, Secretary Wallace has advocated an "ever normal granary" and accompanying crop controls.

The Government, under this proposal, would make loans on farm surpluses stored in bumper years for use in lean years. If the stored surpluses became so hunge as to depress farm prices, strict crop controls would go into effect.

Thus far the furious debate over the court bill has seemed to block action on this farm measure. Three other Administration bills already have been enacted, however:

1. Extension of the present soil-conservation act, with its benefit payments of $500,000,000 a year until 1942. When the legislation first was enacted, it provided that control of the program should pass to "Little AAA's" to be set up in the 48 States. Few States set up their agencies and Congress voted to continue central control.

2. Broadening of the Federal marketing act, which permits farmers to control marketing of crops. This was part of the original AAA and has been the basis for numerous interstate programs for milk, fruits and specialty crops.

3. Appropriation of more than $1,000,000,000 for Federal agencies that aid the farmer.

Two other farm measures have almost finished the legislative journey:

1. A modified tenancy program for converting farm renters, sharecroppers and other landless agrarians into owner-operators. Senate and House conferees have ironed out differences in separate measures enacted by the two chambers. The conferees recommended that $10,000,000 be appropriated for the first year, $25,000,000 the second, and $50,000,000 each succeeding year.

2. A Federal crop insurance program, starting with wheat in 1938. Farmers would pay premiums in commodities and receive indemnities in the same form when they suffered losses.

The Senate has already approved this and authorized $100,000,000 to put the Government into the all-risk crop insurance business, where private concerns have failed. A House sub-committee also has approved.

Would-Be Suicide Seized in Fight on 16th-Story Ledge

Louisville, Ky., July 11 (AP).—Firemen battled a red-haired Cleveland youth on a narrow ledge around the sixteenth floor of a downtown hotel today before dragging him to safety.

The youth, Louis Berlin, 20, said he lost his nerve when he crawled out on the ledge and looked down.

"I ran up the stairs at the hotel," he told police. "If I had stopped at the tenth floor, I would have jumped, but I didn't know for sure that a ten-story drop would kill me. So I kept climbing to the top. After I got there and looked down, the distance was too much for me."

Occupants of an office across the street saw the youth and notified Asa Bennett and George Bunnell, firemen. Bennett and Bunnell were lowered by ropes to the ledge, as hundreds of churchgoers stood silently in the street. The grim youth warded off the efforts of the firemen to rescue him, but he finally was overpowered.

Police Seek Boy, 20, In Orphan Girl's Death

New Haven, Conn., July 11 (AP).—Police began a State-wide man-hunt today for Joseph Dumorad, 20, wanted for questioning in connection with the slaying of a 16-year-old orphan high school girl in the home where both lived.

The body of Estelle Fineberg, battered and gashed, was found yesterday by Mrs. Bessie Moran, her grandmother, in Dumorad's attic bedroom.

McNutt Stirs TempestAbout Quezon's Head

President's Power Called Reason for Fear of Dictatorship.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, July 11.—The Tribune today quoted Assemblyman Jose Fuentebella as saying that if semblances of dictatorship appeared in the Philippines it was due to "the unlimited confidence which our National Assembly has for the executive . . . something which is not practiced in the United States . . ."

The statement followed a public flare-up over an Independence Day speech by High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, in which he was represented as having said democracy in the Philippines was only "a matter of form and not of substance."

The Filipino-owned Herald subsequently published a statement saying the speech itself did not affirm the quotation about Philippine democracy, but other newspapers disagreed as to the exact words used at a conference where the statement was formulated.

Fuentebella and Assembly Speaker Gill Montilla conferred today, prior to the former's statement, which said:

"If in some cases we may discern semblances of dictatorship of Hitler and Mussolini, this is due to the unlimited confidence which our National Assembly has for the executive (President Manuel Quezon), in renouncing its prerogatives to this power, something which is not practiced in the United States and which I believe has shocked the high commissioner."

Since inauguration of the Commonwealth in 1935, some quarters have charged Assemblymen were mere "yes men" for Quezon.

The controversy over the speech followed by only a few weeks a public stir over McNutt's order that he be toasted ahead of President Quezon at public functions.

6 Towns Mop Up After W.Va. Flood

Wheeling, W. Va., July 11 (AP).—Six flood-weary West Virginia communities began mopping up today after two creeks flooded homes and business houses and caused damage the Wheeling Intelligencer estimated at $500,000.

County Health Commissioner R. M. Peddicord estimated between 300 and 350 families were forced to flee to the hills.

Triadelphia, Elm Grove, Valley Grove, Point Mills, Roneys Point and Majorsville were isolated yesterday after a rain of 2.20 inches in less than three hours.

Woman Strangled In New York Hotel

New York, July 11 (AP).—Garrotted with a silk stocking, a stout, dark woman in her middle thirties was found dead today by a maid in a cheap hotel on a lower broadway corner.

Discovery of the near-nude body, sprawled across a bed, started a search by police for the stocky, swart man who registered with the woman in the hotel Saturday as "Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fyletti."

Mae West to Ask Divorce.

Los Angeles, July 11 (AP).—Reports circulated in film circles tonight that buxom Mae West was planning to file suit for divorce from Frank Willard, New York actor she married in 1911. The actress remained in seclusion.

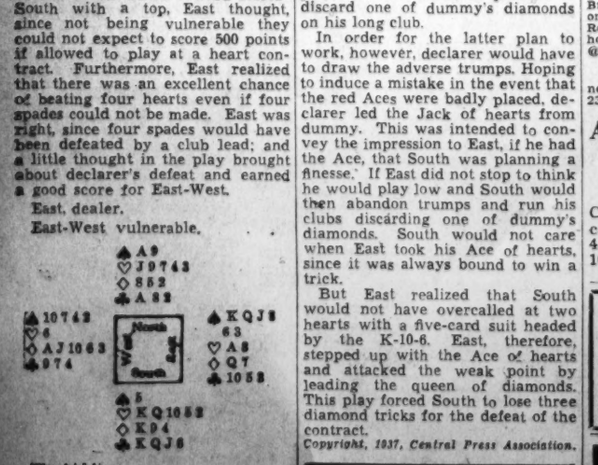

Contract Bridge

Where Haste Pays.

At rubber bridge East would have bid four spades on the cards shown below. In tournament play, however, conservatism pays when a close decision must be made. A set of two tricks would reward North-South with a top. East thought, since not being vulnerable they could not expect to score 500 points if allowed to play at a heart contract. Furthermore, East realized that there was an excellent chance of beating four hearts even if four spades could not be made. East was right, since four spades would have been defeated by a club lead; and a little thought in the play brought about declarer's defeat and earned a good score for East-West.

East, dealer.

East-West vulnerable.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠	3 ♡
Pass	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

West opened the deuce of spades, dummy winning with the Ace. South realized that his game depended either on a favorable position of the Ace of diamonds, or on the failure of opponents to attack the diamonds early enough in the play. In that event, he planned to discard one of dummy's diamonds on his long club.

In order for the latter plan to work, however, declarer would have to draw the adverse trumps. Hoping to induce a mistake in the event that the red Aces were badly placed, declarer led the Jack of hearts from dummy. This was intended to convey the impression to East, if he had the Ace, that South was planning a finesse. If East did not stop to think he would play low and South would then abandon trumps and run his clubs discarding one of dummy's diamonds. South would not care when East took his Ace of hearts, since it was always bound to win a trick.

But East realized that South would not have overcalled at two hearts with a five-card suit headed by the K-10-6. East, therefore, stepped up with the Ace of hearts and attacked the weak point by leading the queen of diamonds. This play forced South to lose three diamond tricks for the defeat of the contract.

Steel Output Cut by Holiday To 74 Per Cent

Good Buying Reported Especially in Heavy Products.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 11.—In the face of expected decline in steel buying in the lighter lines steelmakers continue to produce at the best rate circumstances will allow, in the effort to work off tonnages already specified and to reduce the present delay in deliveries, says Steel.

In spite of such efforts some mills can offer no better than ten to 12 weeks on cold-rolled sheets and some are booked into October on hot-rolled. In other cases four to eight weeks can be obtained.

With this situation, better buying is appearing in other lines, notably in heavy steel, and some early placements of sheets, strip, bars and other steel are being made for 1938 models of automobiles. Railroads have placed substantial orders for rails and rolling stock and a fair volume is pending for this purpose. Structurals are being placed in large tonnages, especially in the West. A leading steelmaker shipped more tonnage in June than in May.

Fall Buying Is Expected.

The general expectation is that the fall will bring a renewed volume of buying and that this is likely to appear before present backlogs have been cleared, thus bridging the summer lull and reducing the usual dull period. Some sellers are not booking beyond third quarter, though there is no indication of a rise in prices for that delivery. Some sentiment for an increase of $1 on pig iron has appeared but is not strong.

Observance of the July Fourth holiday and some vacation idleness brought the national operating rate down 3½ points to 74 per cent of capacity for last week as a whole. However, resumption of production by strike-bound plants during the week gave a higher rate at midweek, probably about 78 per cent, and the promise is for a better level this week. Last week Pittsburgh dropped 13 points to 67 per cent, Wheeling 15 points to 77, New England 6 points to 86, Detroit 5 points to 95, Cleveland 2 points to 47 and Eastern Pennsylvania 1 point to 65 per cent. Chicago gained 6½ points to 70 per cent, Youngstown 1 point to 76 and Birmingham 13 points to 96. Buffalo at 87 per cent and Cincinnati and St. Louis, both at 93, showed no change.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Regain Losses as Waning Strike Troubles Reassure Investors.

New York, June 11.—Having decided that the C. I. O. strikes in the steel mills had collapsed and that the manner of carrying on the violent labor leadership struggle in that and other industries would so alienate public opinion as to promote the cause of law and order for some time to come, securities markets continued the improvement that began just before the holidays.

That prices should advance with the failure of the strikes to tie up American industry surprised no one. It had been generally predicted that the decline had been overdone from the standpoint of corporation earnings. Prices for stocks in particular had been pressed down in anticipation of more than a seasonal recession in business in the last half year, which many feared would result from the labor difficulties.

Improvement in that situation released for cautious investment a large amount of idle investment money, and it brought on some mild short covering as well. Much more money is prepared to go into the markets when the clouds lift in other directions, but the rush for bargains naturally will slow down, for the stock market this week recovered all the ground it had lost since toward the end of May. Prices now are ruling in greater sympathy with profits and a reasonable outlook for business without the extraordinary factors of strikes and threats of war and financial collapse abroad. Bonds also hardened for the same general reasons and commodities showed a greater impulse to rise, especially in the farm products division, where hog prices were pushed to the highest point in eight years.

Trade Reports Good.

Trade statistics of last week told a more cheerful story. Railroad freight carloadings are advancing more than in recent years at this season, largely because of the extraordinary vitality in the steel and motor industries and the greater crop movement. Carloadings for the previous week apparently passed the 800-car mark, and the holiday passenger traffic was unusually heavy. The holiday cut into steel operations last week, which as an offset were lifted by the reopening of more mills until recently closed by the strikes. The steel price structure is hardening, with another rise in steel scrap prices.

Motor sales for June, as indicated by the record of the General Motors Corporation, felt a seasonal decline from the previous month and, for General Motors, dropped below the same month of a year ago, thanks to further labor interruptions, but it is doubtful if consumer demand for motor cars is falling much. Retail trade continues higher than a year ago, in dollar volume, and other signs reinforce the evidence that so far the rise in wages has added to the "real" wage income of the recipients; higher living costs have not yet overtaken the increases in wages.

More Promises.

It is also unlikely that as yet very great cuts have been made in corporation profit margins by the rising costs, but those costs are being felt. Retail prices are now beginning to catch up with the long increase in wholesale prices. Just how corporation profits were affected in second quarter is not as yet generally known. The markets still are waiting for the first industrial reports covering the period, but with the summer well advanced apprehension of more than a seasonal recession in business in this and the coming month is diminishing. The large crops and high prices for them promise a good autumn business, marred perhaps only by higher taxes likely to be imposed by Congress.

News from Washington last week indicates that the administration is becoming more sensitive to the unbalanced budget, and is working to cut down expenditures—of a routine nature. No hint yet has been given that the real drain on taxpayers' money, such as the grandiose schemes for public works and relief and the vast organization brought into being to keep the affair going, will be plugged. If the budget is to be balanced in the current fiscal year the feat will be accomplished largely through a tremendous rise in revenues, which might come partly from higher rates and partly from an inflationary spurt in business activity.

New Offerings Total At Low for the Year

New York, July 11.—New security offerings in this market during last week were the smallest of any like period since election week of last year. The total of $4,850,500 compares with $148,168,500 last week, $28,418,800 in the corresponding week of last year, $62,191,000 in 1935, $40,056,000 in 1934 and $11,784,000 in 1933. For the year to date the total is $1,715,315,100, compared with $3,056,506,890 in the corresponding period of last year, $1,656,493,500 in the 1935 period, $816,719,400 in 1934 and $362,859,000 in 1933.

Higher Rentals Seen as Realty Taxes Advance

Washington Tax Rate Is Lowest of 14 Cities in the East.

New York, July 10.—A general rise in real estate tax rates for 1937 is indicated by a survey just completed by Eli T. Watson & Co., covering 14 of the largest cities in the eastern part of the United States. The survey concludes that rental increases are in prospect for the coming renting reasons for practically all types of properties to meet the increased tax charges as well as increased costs of operations.

An increase in the tax rate was noted for each of the Boroughs of New York City. Substantial increases were noted in Rochester with a jump from 2.59 last year to 2.74 and in Syracuse from a 1936 rate of 3.018 to 3.33 in 1937. Baltimore, Md., shows a 10 point increase in the tax rate, going from 2.71 to 2.81, while Boston's rate went up from 3.80 to 3.87. Tax rates for the two years were unchanged in Philadelphia with rate of 2.63, Richmond, Va., 2.20 and Washington, D. C., 1.50.

Insurance Stocks Advance in Week

New York, July 11.—Insurance stocks in the New York City market moved to higher levels during the past week, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster.

The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on July 9 totaled $613,879,000, compared with $600,880,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $12,998,000, or 2.16 per cent.

The current average yield of the 20 issues of 3.69 per cent compares with a yield of 3.77 per cent on July 2. The current market value equals 98 per cent of the current liquidating value, compared with 96 per cent a week ago. Quoted prices for the 20 issues now average 15.7 times their combined earnings against 15.4 times at the close of the previous week.

N. Y. Central Net 19c Per Share in May

New York, July 11 (AP).—New York Central Railroad reported May net income after fixed charges of $1,215,940, equal to 19 cents a share on the capital stock against $73,493 or 1 cent a share in May, 1936.

For the 5 months ended May 31 net income was $7,669,431, equal to $1.19 a share against a deficit of $684,962 in the same period last year.

228 Locomotives Ordered in 6 Months

New York, July 11.—Orders for 22 locomtives, 528 freight cars and 10 passenger cars in June brought the six months total up to 228 locomotives, 45,000 freight cars and 456 passenger cars, Railway Age reported today.

June rail orders totaled 10,000 tons bringing the six months total to 65,017 tons.

Zinc Price Advanced.

New York, July 11 (AP).—Leading producers today advanced the price of zinc $5 a ton, to 7 cnts a pound from 6.75 cents at East St. Louis. Rising contra-seasonal demand and depletion of domestic supplies during June were given as reasons for the move. The 6.75 cents price has ruled since early in April.

'Super-Sleuth' Is Caricature Of a Film Type

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SUPER SLEUTH," RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Harry Segall, adapted to the screen by Gertrude Purcell, costarring Jack Oakie and Ann Sothern, with Eduardo Ciannelli, Edgar Kennedy, Joan Woodbury, Alan Bruce, Bradley Page, Paul Guilfoyle, Willie Best, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Paul Hurst, Ann Hovey, Fred Kelsey and others. Directed by Ben Stoloff. Reviewed Saturday night at RKO-Keith's.

A slightly different twist has been given the ubiquitous screen detective story in this fast-moving comedy-melodrama that lays its chief stress on the comedy rather than the serious aspects of its staccato narrative.

It seems to this observer that full advantage was not taken of the possibilities of a tale that confronts an infallible cinema crime analyst with a real murder in actual life which he, perforce, must solve to save his face in the view of his public as well as of the police department he has ridiculed as an astigmatic group of official incompetents. The picture gives the impression of having been produced on a limited time schedule and to have been rushed through its major "story points" without regard to any of the subtle touches of character development that might have been introduced.

However, with the growingly abundant Master Jack Oakie in the title role, and a considerable number of comedy experts in the supporting cast, "Super Sleuth" affords many laughs, even if it does not carry complete conviction. Mr. Oakie's role is that of an over-inflated—literally as well as figuratively—motion picture star, who has won wide popularity by his screen performances as a criminologist who never makes a mistake. When confronted by the real murder, he makes plenty, but through devious circumstances that are rather more accidental than planned, he does, in the end, bring about the apprehension of the writer of the "poison pen" letters and the poor marksman who has taken many potshots at him from ambush.

Travesties All Film Sleuths.

It probably is not fair to judge this picture on any basis of sound dramatic structure, since it obviously is designed to caricature the entire tribe of celluloid sleuths whose achievements on the silver sheet are so invariably inspired. Mr. Oakie pokes fun at himself as well as at the uniformed minions of the law.

The whole thing hinges upon Willard Martin's supreme egotism and the quick succession of difficulties into which it plunges him. Through his barbed attacks, he incurs not only the enmity of the police department but of the object of the quest, for good measure. This ominous gentleman is a specialist in all manner of bizarre crimes as well as all sorts of instruments of torture, who maintains an eerie and grewsome "museum" in a remote section of town, Prof. Herman by name. Prof. Herman is a persistent Nemesis and an unbelievably poor shot with his umbrella gun. Although the professor is a welcome consultant in the home and studio of the fresh Mr. Martin, and vice versa, he takes his random shots from long distance, pinking away at the screen star in his studio, at his home and in his automobile. He misses by an eyelash every time. This is just as well, or there would be no plot.

"March of Time" Added.

Oakie is still Oakie in his present assignment—a wise-cracking, impudent upstarf who has no regard for anybody's feelings but his own. He gets many laughs. Ann Sothern, the co-star of the film, is cast as the studio publicity expert assigned to the Martin pictures and has her hands full trying to keep her principal out of jail or the graveyard, at the same time developing the only romantic vein the story possesses. Edgar Kennedy, of "slow burn" fame; Eduardo Ciannelli, as the sinister Prof. Herman; Joan Woodbury, Paul Guilfoyle, as the picture director, and Robert Emmett O'Connor are foremost among the supporting players, Mr. Kennedy, especially, having some amusing bits with a toupee.

"The March of Time," companion attraction on the new bill that opened Saturday deals effectively with three subjects—the Hawaiian Islands as a strategic military base in the Pacific; the problem of 300,000 orphaned babies in the United States, and the amazing history of the Rockefeller millions and what they have done for humanity. This, it seems, was the one great American fortune that continued to build throughout the depression period.

The bill is completed by "Meanie, Miny, Moe" cartoon comedy, "The Country Store," and a new issue of the Pathe News, showing the desolate area in which the Earhart search has been unsuccessfully pursued.

Little

"Berkeley Square," that sentimental and slightly enigmatic romance that combines the years 1933 and 1784 by a sort of fourth-dimensional treatment of the time element, yesterday was revived for a week's run at the Little Theater.

Leslie Howard is the star of this picture, in the role of the American who is transported back through time and amazes all with whom he comes in contact by being able to talk glibly of persons and events that have not as yet come upon the world scene. He is looked upon as an emissary of Satan, by all but Helen, the one young woman who seems to understand and admire him. This role is ingenuously assumed by Heather Angel.

Other members of the cast include such eminent players as Valerie Taylor, Olin Keith-Johnston, Alan Mowbray, Juliette Compton, Betty Lawford, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Samuel Hinds, and Beryl Mercer. The story was adapted from the stage play by John Balderston.

The usual array of short-reel subjects and news events round out the bill.

Warner Bros. Plan Nation-Wide Exhibition of Films Over Two-Day Period to Sound Public Screen Taste

Eight Major Features to Be Shown Simultaneously in 31 Cities, Including Washington; Year's Growth of the Picture Industry; New Conductor and Orchestra for National; "Courageous" Captures Prize.

FOR the first time in the history of the screen, it is believed, the motion picture industry is seeking the advice of representatives of scores of civic, church and educational agencies in a Nation-wide, two-day preview exhibition of a cross-section of the new season's picture product, to be held simultaneously in 31 of the principal "key cities" in the United States.

BELL.

According to an announcement from the New York offices of Warner Brothers, the previews will be held on August 9 and 10 in specially selected theaters. Forums are planned for the exhibitions, in order to obtain suggestions from the invited guests, and special questionnaires have been prepared so that audiences may indicate the type of entertainment they prefer on the screen.

Gradwell L. Sears, executive in charge of Warner distribution, states that committees comprised of city and State officials, motion picture critics, club women, prominent exhibitors and other interested groups are now being organized to sponsor the simultaneous national previews. He goes on to say that the films to be displayed have been selected as a representative cross-section of the company's product for the fall season and will include all types of cinema entertainment from tragedy to comedy.

Mr. Sears reveals that the films to be shown will include one biographical picture, two different types of musicals, one tragedy, two comedies and two straight dramas. These will be "The Story of Emile Zola," starring Paul Muni; "They Won't Forget," a tragedy, with Claude Rains and Gloria Dickson; "It's Love I'm After," with Leslie Howard, Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland; "That Certain Woman," a straight dramatic film play with Bette Davis and Henry Fonda, and two distinct kinds of musicals, "Mr. Dodd Takes the Air," with Kenny Baker, and "Varsity Show," starring Dick Powell.

It will be seen from this outline—which so enthused one of my ardent and esteemed contemporaries that he stepped up the official release date of the announcement one full day—that the previews will represent no cursory glance at a picture or two, but will embrace a total of eight films to be viewed in two days, plus short subjects that will be added to each screening.

The other two pictures necessary to make up the eight will be "The Perfect Specimen," with Errol Flynn and Joan Blondell, and "Confession," in which Kay Francis, Ian Hunter and Basil Rathbone play the principal roles. "The Perfect Specimen" is a comedy-drama; "Confession" a straight drama.

In Washington, the exhibition probably will be put on in the Warner Brothers' Ambassador Theater, there being no matinee performances at that handsome house on the days specified for the showings.

The other cities where the previews are to be held are Albany, N. Y.; Boston, Mass.; Buffalo, N. Y.; New Haven, Conn.; New York City; Cincinnati, Ohio; Cleveland, Ohio; Detroit, Mich.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Chicago, Ill.; Des Moines, Iowa; Indianapolis, Ind.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Omaha, Nebr., and St. Louis, Mo. Atlanta, Ga.; Charlotte, N. C.; Dallas, Tex.; Kansas City, Mo.; Memphis, Tenn.; New Orleans, La.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Denver, Colo.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Portland, Oreg.; Salt Lake City, Utah; San Francisco, Calif., and Seattle, Wash.

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your eyes!

"Captains Courageous," in case you are still interested in the career of that incomparable film, has been selected by an overwhelming majority vote of the National Screen Council as winner of the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for June. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, producers of this saga of the Grand Banks and the Gloucester fishermen, also received the award in April for "Romeo and Juliet." Last month's winner was the Warner Brothers' "The Prince and the Pauper."

* * * *

If it is the function of the moving picture to move, it would seem to be making good in a big way.

The motion picture industry's considerable contribution to the return of the pay envelope to home and factory is reflected in an increase of 9,500 permanent employes in the past year, a $10,000,000 expansion in picture production costs and a $7,800,000 rise in the pay roll of Hollywood alone, according to the 1937-38 edition of The International Motion Picture Almanac, out this week. The Almanac, a Quigley publication and therefore completely reliable, is edited by that veteran oracle of the cinema, Terry Ramsay, editor of The Motion Picture Herald, to which reference is so often made in these columns.

In theater construction, with all of the wide range of labor involved, there were 456 new houses built between April, 1936, and June, 1937. In terms of dollars, from 1929 to June of this year, theater construction, including remodeling, brought an expenditure of an estimated $424,914,000—almost half a billion dollars.

New employment ranged from an increase of 18,436 placements of "extras" by the Central Casting Bureau in Hollywood, to 4,500 more in theaters (880 more houses operating than a year ago), and a similar number of additional employment opportunities in the distribution branch of the industry.

The average admission price rose one and one-half cents and between 83,000,000 and 88,000,000 tickets were bought weekly at an average cost of 22 cents, most of them between 7:30 and 8:30 in the evening. If everyone living in the United States should try to attend the same performance, there would be a problem for the exhibitor—although probably a welcome one—for the average ratio of population to seats in 93 cities of more than 100,000 population is 8.9, and for the country as a whole, exclusive of the large cities, it is 14.4.

And this used to be looked upon as a fly-by-night, "shooting gallery" form of public entertainment!

* * * *

The National Theater will greet the 1937-38 season with a new orchestra, according to announcement by Manager Edmund Plohn, who has appointed George Gaul, well known Washington musician and conductor, to assemble a new National Theater orchestra which will uphold musically the fine dramatic tradition of one of the oldest and most distinguished tabernacles of the living drama in the country. Mr. Gaul, perhaps, is best known as personnel manager, librarian and playing member of the National Symphony Orchestra, under the conductorship of Dr. Hans Kindler. He also has held the post of assistant to the conductor. Mr. Gaul is an accomplished violinist and trombonist, as well as conductor. His father, the late Prof. Fritz Gaul, was a close friend of Franz Liszt and a classmate and lifelong friend of the late Victor Herbert.

Stage Royalty Poses for Camera

In a year when British monarchs were much in the headlines, the two most popular plays on Broadway were "Victoria Regina" and "King Richard II." Pictured above are Helen Hayes in the title role of the former and Maurice Evans as the latter. Miss Hayes' play opened in the National Theater in this city before going into New York and "Richard II" is among next season's National bookings.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: Augusta Wallace is the daughter of a Louisville newspaper man. She's in New York now, trying to establish herself in the theater . . . Miss Wallace has written a play entitled "Trailer to a Star" and wanted to have copies typed so that she could send it around to the managers. She didn't have enough money. And so, in return for $23 with which to pay the typist, Augusta Wallace sold a one-third interest in the play to her roommate!

It's sensational and revolutionary" is his modest description. "I'll feature my discovery—'The Lost Chord!'"

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Jesse Block of Block & Sully went to see the Braddock-Louis fight pictures with Fred Kohlmar, Goldwyn's assistant . . . As they entered the theater, Block said: "I have a feeling that Braddock is going to win tonight." When Kohlmar laughed at him, Block became infuriated and screamed: "In fact, I'm so sure of my hunch I'll bet $10 on—" . . . They wagered, saw the fight reels—and Block paid.

GAME AND HUNT DEPARTMENT: Allyn Joslyn was one of the madcap, know-it-all screen writers in the Broadway production of "Boy Meets Girl." As a result, Warners signed him to appear in the movie version of "Death in the Deep South," the story based upon the Leo Frank lynching. Warners changed the title to "They Won't Forget," and notified Joslyn that he would appear in it. "What is it," he wrote back, "an Elephant Picture?"

EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT: Some of the local theaters now are exhibiting a movie short based upon Milton Berle's Community Sing broadcasts. Berle doesn't appear in the film. But among the extras can be found Mrs. Berle, his mother—who got $7.50 per day.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Darryl Zanuck's "Love and Hisses" will be the most alliterative picture ever filmed. The story was written by Art Arthur, and the cast will include Ben Bernie, Simone Simon and W. Winchell . . . Arthur is writing the screen play with Curtis Kenyon. "Got any ideas?" Kenyon asked . . . "Yes," Art replied. "Will you please spell 'Curtis' with a 'K'?"

HELP WANTED: Charles King, who once starred in "Broadway Melody," received a series of unfortunate setbacks in New York. A few weeks ago he got a job as a table singer in a local hotel, but even that didn't last . . . King decided to go to California. Pat Rooney, headed for Fort Worth, suggested that he accompany him to Texas. "If you don't like it," Rooney said, "you can go ahead to California." . . . King arrived in Fort Worth and six hours later he had two jobs—one in the Honkey-Tonk and another at the Pioneer Palace.

PERSONAL: In the course of his duties, Press Agent Monte Proser phones the newspapers at frequent intervals to relate some news notes for publication. Yesterday he phoned one of the city desks and sighed: "Gee, I wish I had some news for you." . . . "Well, I have some news for you," the editor replied. "It just came over the wire." . . . "What is it?" Proser asked. "Your wife," he was told, "just divorced you!"

STOCK REPORTS: The critics all agreed that the only noteworthy scene in the movie "New Faces" is the stock-broker scene—which had been used in the Ziegfeld Follies, and which was written by the late David Freedman . . . R. K. O., which spent hundreds of thousands for the movie, bought that scene from the Shuberts for $4,500—$2,000 of which went to Freedman's estate.

Dean Ackerman Urges Pulitzer Picture Prizes

Would Honor Major Films on Same Basis as Now Applied to Stage.

Pulitzer prizes for motion pictures will be sought this year by Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of the Graduate School of Journalism at Columbia University, according to a copyrighted article in the July issue of Cinema Arts.

"Pulitzer prizes should be established for the cinema to recognize the outstanding and distinguished achievements in this latest of the arts," Dean Ackerman states in the article.

"The literally stupendous influence of motion pictures throughout the world as a medium of education merits a series of awards comparable to the world-famous Nobel prizes in science and letters and to the Pulitzer prizes in literature and journalism. I believe the time has come for serious consideration of the practical aspects of this proposal."

Films Were in Infancy.

In his article, he points out that when Joseph Pulitzer established a fund for the Pulitzer prizes, films were "not the dominant factor in education that they are today, and it was natural that he should think only in terms of the printed word and the stage."

Today, however, motion pictures are an influence on public thought vast enough to "justify one of the leading educational institutions in giving them official recognition," Dean Ackerman contends.

Because of the important effect motion pictures have had on the habits, customs and even the thinking of people in every civilized country, and because they are primarily American in conception and achievement, the cinema deserves the highest possible recognition, he believes.

School to Make Awards.

Dean Ackerman's plan would provide for a "series of prizes that would be awarded by Columbia University on the recommendation of the graduate school of journalism."

He urges complete co-operation among actors, producers, directors, and technicians of the movie world, just as there is among newspapers, book publishers, authors, producers and the university each year when nominations are received for the Pulitzer prizes in letters.

"Surely," he writes, "the motion picture world, which combines so many creative arts, with their imagination and daring, could join with us in establishing a series of prizes worthy of the truly important status of the modern motion picture."

Jordon Defender Challenges Rival For Job to Debate

John M. Holzworth, lawyer who helped Thomas Jordon escape the electric chair, yesterday announced he had challenged Representative Charles D. Millard to debate the worthiness of each for the job of surrogate in Westchester County, N. Y.

In order to avoid a grueling primary campaign during the "hot summer months, and to save us both expense," Holzworth said in a letter, "I propose that you and I debate the question of whether you are properly fitted to fill the position of surrogate." The debate would be held before three New York State Supreme Court judges.

Holzworth addressed his letter "Dear Charlie," and after stating "I feel you lack the necessary experience and training and the proper mental equipment," closed with "I do not intend to reflect on you in the slightest."

The lawyer, who maintains offices in the National Press Building here, explained further that he wished to devote the summer to lobbying for the passage of a Public Defender Law in the District. He contended Jordon never would have been convicted had he had first class counsel.

Rialto

Reverting to its former custom of opening its new bills on Sunday, the Rialto Theater yesterday inaugurated a double feature program of revivals, consisting of "Sky Devils" and "My Man Godfrey."

First released in January, 1932, "Sky Devils" is a comedy of the air in which the principal roles are taken by Spencer Tracy, George Cooper and William Boyd, supported by Ann Dvorak, Billy Bevan, Yola D'Avril, Forrester Harvey, William B. Davidson and Jerry Miley. The piece is played throughout in a spirit of high good humor and concerns the adventures of a couple of slackers—Tracy and Cooper—who find themselves on the fighting front in France in spite of anything they can do to prevent it. Bizarre flying stunts mark the aerial portions of the film, when "ground pilots," notably Cooper, find themselves taking unintentional solo flights. Direction was by Edward Sutherland. The dialogue was written by Robert Benchley, Joseph Moncure March, James Starr, Carroll Graham and Garrett Graham.

"My Man Godfrey," dating, not quite so far back, is one of the most delightful of comparatively recent comedies. It relates the story of a goofy family, one member of which adopts a "forgotten man" off the city dump settlement of derelicts and installs him as butler in her home. How he salvages himself and the fortunes of the patronizing family forms the crux of the play. William Powell and Carole Lombard are cast in the foremost roles, with an able cast in support.

Short subjects and newsreel complete the bill.

Oxford Parley to Plan World Christian Front

Oxford, England, July 11 (AP).—The ages-old conflict of church and state, as revived by the rise of European dictatorships, today promised to be the outstanding topic of discussion in the meeting of the Universal Christian Council for Life and Works which opens tomorrow at Oxford University.

Leading delegates said an attempt would be made to form a world front of Christian churches to oppose "the increasing menace of Fascist states and dictators to religious liberty."

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, July 12.—Idol chatter: All movie stars wear dark glasses as a disguise; everyone else in Hollywood wears dark glasses to look like movie stars. Thumbnail description of Marlene Dietrich: Ned Sparks purring in skirts. Wonder if Freddie Bartholomew could whip Bobby Breen? And doesn't Spanky McFarland make you think of a miniature Oliver Hardy? Maria Shelton, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest "sensational new find," used to be Buck Jones's leading lady in horse-operas.

DIETRICH.

Florence (Davenport) Rice is very proud of her initials. Bet Jean Arthur could kick herself for turning down the "Vicki Lester role in "A Star Is Born." Henry Fonda won a hay-pitching contest in Nebraska; he'll give you all the details if he gets the chance. Suppose it's loyalty to dear old Erin that makes George Brent drink so much Dublin Stout. Peas from the same pod: Mary Brian (now) and May Robson (40 years ago).

Ayres quit studying the stars when he quit being a star—and lost his press agent. Igor Gorin is Dick Foran's favorite singer, but not vice versa. Claudette Colbert's mother has a separate apartment in Claudette's new home. Candidates for the "happiest-tho-married" title: Joel McCrea and Frances Dee. George Raft's colored valet could not read or write when he went to work for "Gawge"—he still can't. You ought to hear what the ex-skipper of John Barrymore's yacht has to say about Elaine and her mama!

The cost of damage suits comes high—especially when the defendant is a motion picture company. Jury members may be movie fans but they seem to take particular delight in socking those "pitchur moguls." Hence the safety-first campaigns which are constantly being concocted by the studios' propaganda departments.

The current campaign at Warner Brothers has a poetic flavor. On every set and in every office are displayed signs bearing rhymed slogans. Two samples "Heedless hurry—endless worry" and "A little more care makes accidents rare." For no good reason they remind me of the would-be sarcastic slogan that Uncle Carl Laemmle posted years ago at Universal. It read: "I would like more loyalty and fewer prima donnas." Some wag crossed it out and substituted: "We would like more money and fewer Laemmles."

Whenever I want to know the low down on a new star, I discount the raves of the press agents and consult the prop men, grips and electricians on the set. It takes a real human being to impress them.

"That Tyrone Power"—one of the set crew informed me the other day—"he's regular. He belongs to our bowling team and he drove in from location, 40 miles, last week to attend our Wednesday meeting. Did you read about the big birthday party he threw for the other stars on the lot? Don't let anybody kid you, that was on the day before his birthday. On his real birthday, he bowled with us."

Hollywood bit-players are sometimes befogged by one good part and apt to go high-hat as a result. A lesser-known of my acquaintance has been without work for nearly a year as the result of one week in the limelight. Meeting him on the boulevard the other day, I asked how things were doing. 'Fine," he told me, "I'm getting $50 a day now, instead of $25." "But I thought you hadn't worked for months," I said. He grinned a little sheepishly. "I haven't," he admitted. "But my price for not working is still fifty bucks a day."

Dunbar Girl Graduate Wins Oratory Contest

Virginia C. Moss, of Arlington, Va., recent Dunbar High School graduate, was the winner of the regional oratorical contest of colored Elks held yesterday in the auditorium of the Howard Theater, incident to the meeting of a fraternal educational and economic congress. She discussed phases of the Constitution affecting the Negro in America, and won over contestants from New England, New York and New Jersey.

The winner will receive a scholarship to the college of her choice, given by the Elks educational department, and will be sent to Cleveland next month to compete in the Elks national oratorical contest.

Mrs. Lamont Soon to Sail For Europe

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

Mrs. Robert P. Lamont will leave her country place in Falls Church, Va., at the end of the month and will sail to Europe for several weeks' stay in Austria. "Just a rest," she said yesterday. "Nothing exciting planned at all."

But friends of Mrs. Lamont are certain that before she returns she will become acquainted with some famous painter, writer or philosopher. Almost all her trips abroad have yielded such a friendship. On one, for example, she met the late George William Russell, "AE," the energetic jack of many trades—painter, philosopher, poet, businessman, editor and co-founder of the famous Abbey Theater.

Was Interested In AE's Painting

Mrs. Lamont was visiting a friend in Dublin who asked if the former would like to meet "AE," the noted Irish writer. "Indeed, I would," said Mrs. Lamont. "I want to talk to him—not about his writing, however, but about his painting." When she did meet Ireland's "massive man with the patriarchial beard," she told him she was particularly interested in his painting. Since this was his hobby, he was delighted. Forthwith, he invited Mrs. Lamont to his house the following Sunday afternoon to see some of his pictures.

Now if "AE" had asked her to one of his famous Sunday night salons, which for many years were notable social events in Dublin, there would have been nothing unusual about it. But as most of the famous man's friends knew, he reserved his Sunday afternoons strictly for himself and rarely received guests. Mrs. Lamont is one of the few persons ever to have been invited for Sunday afternoon tea at his unpretentious little house in Rathgar avenue, which was crowded with paintings and figurines and books.

That Visit Is A Cherished Memory

That visit is one of Mrs. Lamont's most cherished memories. "'Ae' was a man who could make any subject interesting, and he seemed to be interested in everything," she said. "But that day we talked chiefly about painting."

From that talk stemmed a friendship that flourished through the years. Today, Mrs. Lamont treasures a collection of letters from him saved from an extended correspondence. Many of them are illustrated with colored sketches in the margins. Also, she has a book of his poems containing colored-crayon marginal sketches. And one of her most valued possessions is a painting she saw at his house on that first visit. "It's a lovely blue and silver thing . . . imaginative . . . like his poetry," is the way Mrs. Lamont describes it.

"AE" Was Guest of The Lamonts Twice

"But his letters, of course, delighted me more than either his poetry or his painting," she went on. "I answered each one promptly in the hope he would write another. And up until his last illness, he always did."

On two occasions "AE" was a guest of the Lamonts—once at their home in Lake Forrest, Ill., and once when Mr. Lamont was Secretary of Commerce and they were living on Kalorama road in the house afterward bought by the late Gilbert M. Hitchcock. On his last trip to Washington, in January, 1935, he planned again to visit them, this time at the Falls Church place, but his illness prevented.

Another of "AE's" close friends in Washington was the late Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey. She, too, treasured a collection of letters from him.

Speaking of collections—Mrs. Lamont also has a collection of china tea sets, which have come from all over the world. Chances are, when she returns from Austria in the autumn, she will bring back another to add to her lot. What's more, she probably will have struck up a friendship with some person as famous as "AE."

Plan Moonlight Cruise.

The West Virginia State Society will hold its annual moonlight cruise Friday, July 16. It will be on the Steamer City of Washington leaving the Seventh street wharf at 8:30 p. m. Mr. J. L. Bateman, 806 Maryland avenue northeast, and other officers of the society have charge of tickets.

After Their Marriage Saturday Afternoon

Hessler.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nyle Allen posed for this picture shortly after their wedding Saturday afternoon at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. The bride formerly was Miss Elizabeth ("Betsy") Hope Watkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Watkins. Mr. and Mrs. Allen are on a northern wedding trip. They will make their home in Bridgeport, Conn.

THIS WEEK IN THE CLUBS

Party Honors Sorority Head

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Crocker Entertain for Dr. Margaret Sebree.

A BON VOYAGE PARTY was given last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Crocker in Chevy Chase, in honor of Dr. Margaret Sebree, national president of Phi Delta Gamma, fraternity for graduate women. With her husband, Dr. J. Emmett Sebree, Mrs. Sebree sails July 26 to spend six weeks abroad.

The centerpiece for the buffet table from which supper was served was a model of an ocean liner and favors for the guests were miniature pieces of luggage bearing foreign labels. The fraternity colors, black, yellow and white, were carried out in the decorations and menu. The American flag also was used, symbolizing American Univeristy, with which Alpha Chapter, of which Mrs. Crocker is president, is affiliated.

Among the guests present were Miss Marjorie Moon, Miss Elizabeth Haney, Miss Eleanor Gessford, Miss Elma Moulton, Miss Florence Milliken, Miss Marion Hummer, Miss Hazel Feagans, Miss Elma Preinkert, Miss Vera Brungart, Mrs. M. E. Salisbury, Miss Arlene Ball, Miss Ruby Nevins, Mrs. Harold E. Warner, Miss Grace Johnson, Miss Elsie Rackstraw, Miss Effie Marie Ross and Miss Catherine Ludlum.

Women's Club To Hold Dinner

Business and Professional Members to Banquet at Mayflower.

TWO presidents will preside at the All-States' Federation banquet, to be given Friday night at the Mayflower by the Business and Professional Women's Club of Washington. As the plan of having the dinner was inaugurated while Miss Ruth Robinson was still president, and the affair follows her retirement by only two weeks, she and Miss Nina Kinsella, by whom she is succeeded, will share the honors.

Reservations from the various clubs are continuing to come in. Mrs. Gay Quoidback, president of the Washington State Federation, will fly here, arriving Friday morning. She will return to Washington by boat after the Atlantic City convention via the Panama Canal. Other reservations have been received from Fort Worth, Tex.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Miami, Fla.; Webster City, Iowa; Ashland, Nebr.; Rockwell City, Iowa; Longview, Wash.; Wichita Falls, Tex.; Osawatomie, Kans.; Sapulfa, Okla., and Columbia, S. C.

Miss Dorothy Blair, in charge of the ushers, has appointed the following members of the club to serve in this capacity: Aubyne E. Olivet, Helen Frownfelter, Sylvia M. Rice, Aura I. Monroe, Hazel G. Pettijohn, Mary Schlesinger, Evelyn S. Gibbs, Beulah Dicks, Sally Wells, Maude K. Williams, Margaret Ralston and Elba Humphries.

'Smilin' Thru' To Be Given at Sylvan Theater

Blackfriars Guild Will Present Offering Tomorrow Evening.

Many Washington drama lovers and their out-of-town guests will attend the performance of "Smilin' Thru" tomorrow evening at the Sylvan Theater in the Washington Monument Grounds, offered by the Blackfriars Guild, as the fourth Summer Festival of the present season. The play is being repeated by request due to its last season's propularity in the Summer Festival series. A preliminary concert at 8 o'clock will precede the drama.

Among those who have reserved seats are Mrs. James Dulaney, who is entertaining a large party for the play; Mrs. Frank Renaud, who is entertaining Miss Barbara Renaud, from New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Harleigh H. Hartman, of Des Moines, Iowa; Mrs. John J. O'Connor, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. Patrick Manning, of Tompkinsville, Conn.; the Rev. John J. McLarney, of Chicago; the Rev. Urban Nagle, of Providence, R. I.; Mr. and Mrs. John Victory, Mrs. Clarence Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Diggins and Mrs. Raphael Shanafelt.

Many of the staff of the Blackfriars Institute at Catholic University of America, and many of the students at the institute will also be at the performance of "Smilin' Thru." In addition, there will be many drama lovers from out of town who are here to attend the sessions of the Catholic drama convention in August, when the Blackfriars will present, also at the Sylvan Theater, "If I Were King."

The Community Center Department's Summer Festival committee has placed tickets on sale to the public at the Hotel Washington and the Hotel Willard, and tickets will also be available at the Sylvan Theater on Tuesday night. In case of inclement weather tomorrow, the performance will take place Wednesday evening.

Ft. Stevens Battle Program Tonight

G, A. R. and Citizens' Groups Planning Exercises.

Exercises commemorating the seventy-fourth anniversary of the Battle of Fort Stevens will be held by the Grand Army of the Republic and the Brightwood Citizens Association, sponsored by the Department of the Potomac, Woman's Relief Corps, at 6:30 tonight at Fort Stevens, Thirteenth and Rittenhouse streets.

Mr. John M. Kline, commander of the Department of the Potomac, will make an address, and Mr. J. C. Proctor will also speak. The pledge of allegiance to the flag will be led by Mrs. Mary E. Bowen, department president, Woman's Relief Corps. May S. Parker, department chaplain, will lead in prayer.

Mr. Charles W. Ray, president of the Brightwood Citizens Association, will be in charge of the exercises.

Fort Stevens Fife and Drum Corps of the American Legion will play selections and Mrs. Alice C. Neal will be the soloist. All patriotic organizations have been invited to attend.

Burnside Woman's Relief Corps, auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, which met June 27 at the Thomas Circle Club, with the president, Mrs. B. B. Brown, presiding, accepted the invitation of the Department of the Potomac Corps to participate in the exercises.

Mrs. F. G. Umhau Heads City Welfare Group

Mrs. F. G. Umhau has been elected president of the Dr. Kate Waller Garrett Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home for the coming year. Other new officers include Mrs. Hans Sorenson, vice-president; Mrs. W. F. Holtgreve, secretary and Mrs. R. L. Spire, treasurer.

Mrs. Umhau was hostess at the closing meeting of the season at which the circle celebrated its third anniversary.

Bar Harbor Club Holds Tourney

Putting Contest Is Set for Tomorrow; Many From Capital at Resort.

Bar Harbor, Me., July 11.—The Kebo Valley Country Club, which has been opened and active for the past two weeks, is holding its initial putting tournament of the season Monday. These weekly contests are popular with the summer colony of Mount Desert Island and are attended by the majority of the summer residents, among them many of Washington members.

Marshall Langhorne, F. Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart and Joseph E. Wholean, all prominent members of the Washington colony, are registered at the Kebo Club as governors of the club.

Miss Eleanor Neill, of Washington, is a guest of Miss Laura Blair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gist Blair, of Washington, who are residing at Cleftstone cottage. Maj. Gist Blair, of Washington, arrived by plane this week to join Mrs. Blair at their residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanton C. Peelle, of Washington, also were among the recent arrivals. They will stay at Road Cottage in Southwest Harbor for the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. Langhorne gave a dinner at the Pot and Kettle Club for 40 persons Thursday evening.

The British Military Attache and Mrs. Wyndham Torr will arrive shortly to be the guests of Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay, of Washington, at her home, The Breakwater. Mrs. Jay is giving a dinner in honor of her guests Wednesday.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Once Disdainful of Girl Her Son Seduced, Then Married, Mother Would Make Amends; Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Our 23-year-old son eloped with a girl 17. We were very angry with both young people at the time and did not hide our feelings. Later we learned that they had been intimate before marriage and that the girl was pregnant when he married her. Knowing our son's character, we are convinced the girl was probably more sinned against than sinning. She seems to be very sweet and devoted to our son and we know he loves her.

* * * *

However, we not only ignored the girl but her whole family. We were financially able to look after her but did not—leaving her with her mother, who had to work to support her. Of course; the mother had no choice but to carry the brunt of the situation, as the girl had no place else to live. When she was three months' pregnant, our son transmitted to her a social disease. We paid the doctor's bills for treatment . . . Because of her approaching motherhood, he said he could only do his best and await results. . . .

* * * *

We have never met this girl's mother, although we have permitted our son to bring the girl to our home. All the time our son was away at college we never called up once to ask how the girl was; or if she wanted for anything. We have never given her anything for the expected infant, nor any money to buy medicine or anything else she may need.

* * * *

Now we would like to meet the mother, but don't know how to go about it. Was it our place to go to her when we first learned how things were? Write your opinions and don't spare your words.

REPENTANT.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR REPENTANT: Someone purporting to be a "family friend" of the girl's mother, told the other side of this same tragic story in this column on April 14. It seems strange that it should crop up again now, told, presumably, from the boy's family's side. I suppose I can be pardoned for entertaining the fleeting supposition that this may be a fictional problem, twice presented for the purpose of provoking me to a display of moral indignation. But, as I have done before in more or less similar instances, I shall give my correspondent the benefit of the doubt, and treat the subject with the seriousness it deserves if it is an actual case.

* * * *

If today's petitioner is asking guidance in all good faith; does sincerely repent her spiritual ungenerosity in having ignored the girl and her family up to now; and really wishes to make what amends she can for past sins of omission, I suggest she go straight to the girl's mother without a moment's hesitation and in all humility exert every effort to establish a friendly and co-operative relationship with her. She will have to divest herself of such attitudes of mind as pride and conscious condescension in making such a visit. She must go with a heart full of love, tender compassion, and willingness to understand and help. She should go, indeed, as one who is seeking forgiveness for her own sins of pride, selfishness and past presumption to judge; who wishes to prove the actuality and extent of her repentance by doing all she can to reinvest the girl with health, hope, happiness and self-respect, all of which have been temporarily taken away by her own son's reckless conduct.

* * * *

The girl's mother must be a woman of fine character to have shouldered her crucifying burden so sturdily; and if the boy's mother proves herself, by the right approach to be a woman of potentially equal character, I am sure all barriers of dissimilar background, resentment, and misunderstanding of motives will automatically evaporate and will find themselves working together harmoniously to place their children's lives on a more secure foundation.

* * * *

It is my opinion that the boy's parents did have a moral and social obligation to get in touch with the girl's mother at the very first. But no good purpose is served in rehashing past mistakes based on imperfect understanding. The thing to do is to act unhesitantly and courageously, on one's best or higher impulses, letting "the dead PAST bury its dead."

Message for 'Defensive.'

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: Allow me too say that my experience is similar to that of "Defensive," whose letter was published in your column of July 8. I have my ideals and it is my intention to live up to them and not to be influenced by the cynical criticism or suspicion of weaklings who might be disposed to accuse devoted women friends of "'The Children's Hour' sort of thing," to quote your correspondent's phrase.

* * * *

I have lived thus long by a pattern of decent conduct without having suffered any deterioration mentally, spiritually or physically, and while there is no one who would more appreciate and enjoy the congenial companionship of a husband and the security of a home, I shall continue to subscribe to fastidious habits of living until I meet the man who measures up. If he shouldn't appear, I shall continue to live as now, without dying of a broken heart.

* * * *

Possessing an appreciation of good music, literature, art flowers and travel, I find life full and interesting. I shall not change my mode of living, nor hide my devotion to friends, in an attempt to conform to certain persons' sophisticated social theories. I can even find adverse criticism stimulating, when I know that I am right. And sometimes, when I look at some of the dejected married couples of my acquaintance, I feel that perhaps I am fortunate to be single.

CONSTANCE.

American Designers Sponsor Practical Velvets

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

New York, July 11.—Washington women who are fond of luxurious materials and picturesque styling of a dignified nature, will have opportunity this fall and winter to indulge these preferences by way of the new velvets. In the recent presentation of American fabrics and American design, by the Velvet Guild, velvets were proclaimed queen of the fabrics by the leading designers who presented their new creations and gave short discussions about the oncoming styles. "Velvets, they all agreed, are not only a medium for customes for all occasions, but combine well with other materials. Also, because of the modern chemical treatments, velvet being practically indestructible, it is no longer considered a luxury but is practical and durable."

In the showing of models by 22 different American designers, there was a decided tendency to borrow ideas from 1900, which is considered one of the most dramatic years in American history—in color; silhouette trends; personalities of society, theater, politics and sports. Painters continue to be the greatest source of inspiration for color trends. Just as they were in 1900. For fall and winter, the leading velvet colors will be black, white, red and varied tones, purple, deep browns, rich greens and subtle blues.

There was a general consensus of opinion by designers and fashion authorities that American-made materials and American designs were slowly but surely taking precedence over imports.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Rev. Hales' Discovery.

From London I drove out to a little suburb called Teddington. Here was a little parish church of which the Rev. Stephen Hales was curate during the eighteenth century.

The Rev. Stephen Hales was a curious kind of clergyman. He was more interested in making scientific experiments than in spiritual matters. In particular, his curiosity was aroused by the movements of the juices in the bodies of plants and animals. What made the sap rise in the spring and how much pressure was it under? What about the blood coursing through the body—how much pressure is it under? He made some experiments to determine this, and these are the foundation for our present knowledge of the subject of blood pressure.

The little church of Teddington sits sedately in the center of a busy district on the outskirts of London. In Hales' time it was far out in the countryside. Not far away was Twickenham, the home of Alexander Pope, the poet. From his country seat at Twickenham he wrote those verses which satirized and stung his great contemporaries. Pope probably never heard of modest little Dr. Hales, but the work of the latter was of more importance than that of the misshapen little cynic.

For many years the church of Teddington fell into a state of decay. Then a minister was appointed, who, with great energy, set about restoring it. In the vestibule they found an old neglected gravestone. With difficulty they deciphered the inscription. When they did, it read:

"Here is inter'd the Body of Stephen Hales, D. D., Clerk of the Closet to the Princess of Wales, who was minister of this Parish 51 years. He died the 4th of January 1761 in the 84th year of his age."

The subject of blood pressure has made notable strides since the days of Stephen Hales. For a while the dangers of high blood pressure were overemphasized. Now a more sensible view is held about such things. High blood pressure in itself is simply part of the aging process of the body and causes no symptoms. Many unpleasant feelings are ascribed to blood pressure which have nothing to do with it. Simply because one has high blood pressure, it is not necessarily the cause of unhappy bodily sensations, as is illustrated by an anecdote told me the other day by a London specialist.

"I saw a countrywoman of yours the other day," he said, "she came to see how her blood pressure was. And to cry on my shoulder. She had been told she had high blood pressure and she was feeling very sad. She came over for the Coronation and it had rained every day she had been in London and she wanted to see her son in America. I said to her, 'Madam, it isn't blood pressure that is your trouble. It's homesickness. You take the next boat home and that will cure you.' I didn't even measure her blood pressure."

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Best-Dressed Woman.

(An Interview.)

"As one of the world's best dressed women, Mrs. Van Gilderlyly, would you please explain just what is your secret of style?"

"No secret at all! It's merely a matter of using my brains—and of course having a flair for clothes."

"Then you mean to say that ANY woman could get on a best-dressed list——"

"Absolutely! With a few simple little things carefully chosen. Take myself for example. My entire wardrobe for summer consisted of virtually nothing but a dozen little prints from Schiaparelli, a few simple chiffon evening dresses from Vionnet, a dozen of spectator sports outfits from Molyneux and, of course, the usual supply of smart little cottons, beach ensembles and play clothes."

"Just how do you plan your wardrobe, Mrs. Van Gilderlyly?"

"On a very simple system. To begin with, I of course adhere to two or three basic color schemes for each season—say black and brown for winter, rust and green for fall, gray and navy blue for spring and white beige, pink, yellow, etc., for summer."

"Is that all?"

"That is only the beginning. You see, the whole secret of dress is—accessories. A woman of ingenuity ought to be able to take one simple basic little dress, designed, say by Alix, and by means of the right accessories—smart bags and gloves, stunning hats, unusual jewelry, rich luxurious furs — simply work miracles."

"How should a woman plan her accessories?"

"First of all she should have perfectly shod feet at all times. And distinctive hats. She should never economize on shoes and hats. No matter what a woman wears, she always appears well dressed if she has smart shoes and the right hats. And, of course, rich and luxurious furs."

"What about jewelry?"

"Jewelry will do marvelous things for a basic dress. A sapphire clip, an antique brooch will lift any frock out of the ordinary. Emeralds always add a distinctive touch—especially with luxurious furs."

"What other accessories do you suggest?"

"Cocktail jackets by all means! It's simply miraculous what an ingenious woman can do with a half-dozen or so little cocktail jackets, richly trimmed in fur or beaded with sequins."

"Is it possible for any woman to be glamorous?"

"Undoubtedly! It's 90 per cent wearing the right kind of evening gown—something lavish, dramatic, theatrical. And of course a sweeping evening wrap of sables, ermine in fact any rich and luxurious fur."

"May I inquire, Mrs. Van Gilderlyly if you ever wear the same costume twice?"

"Oh, yes, indeed! Why I have a little summer ensemble from Chanel I have worn probably half a dozen times. I have even worn the same evening gown for several occasions—a little mousseline de soie from Mainbocher. You see the whole secret is having a good designer. It's really economy in the end."

"Then it's really the designer that counts?"

"Oh, no, not entirely. But—a designer helps."

"Mrs. Van Gilderlyly, would you—er—er give some kind of an estimate of how much you spend for clothes?"

"Oh, I dress very economically. Now some women on these best dressed lists spend as high as $100,000 a year. But my husband is in moderate circumstances. With me it's more a matter of planning—using my head. In fact I never spend more than $20,000 a year."

"Then the whole secret of being a best-dressed woman is—shall we say, having a husband who will foot the bills?"

"Oh, no, I wouldn't go so far as to say that. But of course—it helps."

PLEASANT HOMES

DON'T FORGET, lady dear, that moonlight in your hair is something that your husband will notice, even if the two of you have been married long enough to be above sentimental nonsense.

Of course, we realize that a lady in the midst of raising a family doesn't usually have time for moonlight in her hair or any place else. But it's worth keeping in mind that a little of the romantic allure is worth hanging onto through whatever trials and tribulations may inject themselves into your life. We have a friend who's run ragged all day long keeping up with her house and four. But she has one spot sacred to the girl she was in her moonlight and roses days. That's her bedroom . . . all the rest of the house is bedlum with her own and the neighbor children tearing though it all day long. But her room is her sanctuary and no encroachments are permitted. It's as fresh and fragrant as the honeysuckle that droops lovingly over our back fence, but she did it all on a next-to-nothing budget.

It's mostly a story of yards and yards of white dotted swiss as a matter of fact. They have a rather nice poster bed of walnut, a good walnut chest of drawers and a pair of bedside tables that match near enough. The canopy of the bed and spread itself are of dotted swiss made with very full, very wide ruffles, and kept starched to a fare-ye-well. The curtains are of swiss made to match and so is the dressing-table skirt. The walls are papered in a very pale gray ground paper with nosegays in white with just a fleck of pink in them. The rug is a Quaker-gray broadloom (left over from a taupe era living room, but very nice here). A pair of small easy chairs demoted from the living room have slip covers of a deep strawberry-pink crash and this same material is repeated on the top of her dressing table with a piece of plate glass over it (this is where she keeps all her little bottles of sweet-smelling lotions and toilet waters to make her feel as fresh as moonlight and roses. Altogether the effect achieved is charming and refreshing, especially considering what a small financial outlay all this glamour represents. Of course, half of it is her attitude toward this room . . . she really makes the extra effort that it takes to keep herself up to it when she steps in this door. It's just a question of how much romance means in your life whether such a setting is worth the effort!

We thought this room offered several ideas to a busy lady with a house, and it was an excellent decorative solution for a sunny room. It wouldn't be so good in a darkish room.

'Bread - and - Butter' Letters Should Be Mailed Within Week.

By Margaret Wallace.

THOSE who want to be twice-welcome house guests—welcome when they arrive and welcome to return—will not forget to write their "bread and butter" letters. These letters of appreciation for hospitality are as important as "thank you" for any courtesy, and yet there is a surprising number of people who never trouble to write them.

It is necessary, of course, to write these letters whether the visit has been pleasant or not. No one has a right to accept favors from another person without being polite about acknowledgements. The habit some persons have of saying "I will thank you very much now before I leave and therefore you need not expect me to thank you again in a 'bread-and-butter' letter," is very rude.

Week Is Limit.

It is almost as rude as not sending a letter at all to wait too long to send it. These thank-you letters should be mailed at the latest within a week. It is as necessary to write such letters for a night's visit or week-end as it is for a longer stay.

The really polite person will include in such letters an appreciation of every kindness of every member of the family. If a young girl has visited the daughter of the house it is necessary for her to write "thank-you letters" to both the mother and daughter.

Custom has made it good form to express thanks for hospitality by telephone, provided the call is understood especially to express thanks. Those who do not like to write letters or who are pressed for time on account of busy lives, may, when they return home, express their thanks by telegrams, provided these are of the letter kind. This is only permissible for busy people and good friends, however.

Typewriter Permissible.

The thank-you letter, of course, should be written on good paper, in pen and ink. But since so many persons now use the typewriter for social as well as business correspondence, intimate friends or members of the family may send typewritten "thank-you letters." The wise person, however, will be sure that typewritten thank-you letters are not sent to the still existing conservative group of people who think that only hand-written personal letters are polite.

QUERY—Recently I was a guest at a house party given by a young man at his country estate. His mother was the hostess. Should I write and thank her or should I thank the host?

ANSWER—You should thank the mother and also write a letter of appreciation to your host.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 11.

THIS is the season of the year when I spend as much time charging up and down the commodious Hudson River piers as I do trudging the ever-heated pavements of our shopping avenue. At this season the transatlantic sailings and arrivals are about the most colorful event of the town's life. The great ships are carrying huge cargoes of dream girls and wonder men, of stage, screen and society, as well as headliners of the fashion world who are off for Paris openings, or who have just returned from early peeks.

ALICE HUGHES.

Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

But the week this is written I threw out the welcome sign for a quaint little figure in gray, wearing a clerical collar, the tout-ensemble comprising the most talked-of clergyman of the hour. Accompanied by a tall, handsome, gray-haired wife far better turned out than the average spouse of a poor parson, the Rev. Robert Anderson Jardine arrived on our side to fulfill the traditional role of the visiting Englishman—to talk for a fee.

The Rev. Mr. Jardine is a quiet, modest, almost mousey little man—not a churchman of the intellectual or glamourous type—and I imagine his lectures will be pretty strictly limited to an endless retelling of the historic day when he read the Church of England wedding service over the Duke of Windsor and his Mrs. Warfield in Wallis blue. Mr. Jardine kept telling all us interviewers that His Grace of Windsor is a very religious man—a fact which the former Edward VIII has kept concealed from the world to date with astounding efficiency. The little clergyman keeps scolding his grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, saying that the British primate treated the Windsor affair from a political and not a spiritual point of view.

Mr. Jardine seems to forget that the strict Anglican position refuses to admit the idea of divorce just as strongly as does the Roman Catholic Church. Certainly the Archbishop of Canterbury's attitude was in line with the traditional spiritual thought of Britain's established church. It is significant of Mr. Jardine's attitude that he was a Methodist minister for 20 years before taking Anglican orders. Next October 1, the simple little small-town vicar will be out of an English parish. His further livelihood in the church depends on the good will of the English hierarchy. I hope he makes out all right lecturing to us curious Americans.

If there is one untouchable institution in this country, it is the radio. If you have ever spoken over the ether, you know how severely your script has been edited in advance. Rarely is an impromptu speech permitted over a broadcasting chain. Somehow the feeling of radio listeners are more easily wounded than any others. Writers criticize dramatic productions; church sermons are picked to pieces by Monday dissenters; scientists' utterances are put to the most prying tests. But radio speeches are carefully pruned in advance; robbed of their barbs; divested of their dynamite. Fear of suits, I suppose.

* * * *

Well, one girl I know took her life in her hands the other night. The air over the Rudy Vallee hour was sputtering over what she said about the radio. She called it a childish institution, graded down to a low intelligence level. She admitted she rarely heard a program through; found them too dull. She judged radio by the same standards as the stage and screen, of which she is a professional critic—and found the radio sadly lacking in showmanship, entertainment, intelligence and originality.

* * * *

This brave young woman is Cecelia Ager, of the staff of Variety, one of the best publications about show business. Cecelia is a 5-foot girl with a big wallop. Her criticism of the shams and insincerities of show business have won her the reputation of being one of Broadway's best "phoney spotters." She can tell the real from the fake. That's what she did on the Rudy Vallee hour the other night. Maybe it never reached you. Too caustic, it probably burned up the wires. I heard it. It was swell.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Margaret Tallichet, whom you'll be seeing soon in the "Prisoner of Zenda," is beautifying our town with her pretty face . . . At a big press party for Martha Rayo, I found her surprisingly nonsynthetic and, as yet, unspoiled by her recent kalsomining in the Hollywood glamour school. When she was first shown her suite in the St. Moritz, a fine hotel but not as Gold Coast as the Waldorf, Plaza or Pierre, Martha was none the less plenty impressed. She let out a low whistle and said, "Gee whiz!"

Man May Talk Of His Business To Ideal Wife

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York.—Interest in her husband's business and an ability to discuss it with him are essentials for the ideal wife, believes Peter Koch de Gooreynd, prominent clubman, sportsman, inventor and composer, from London, England.

Mr. de Gooreynd, who recently arrived in this country, tackled the subject of wives over a light supper in his Waldorf-Astoria suite.

Surveying his eggs Boulangere with approval, he said. "Of course, it's splendid for a woman to cook, sew and darn her husband's socks, but it's my opinion her patience in listening to her husband expound, and her intelligent understanding of what he says will go further toward a successful marriage."

Mr. de Gooreynd said he could name at least six young wives who would not permit their husbands to discuss business "outside of business hours," and confessed the subject was completely boring and unintelligible to them.

Laughing, the 31-year-old inventor said, "I shouldn't brag about my wife, but it is a fact, she takes as much interest in my work as I do."

That is saying something, for Mr. de Gooreynd is the head of 28 companies altogether, including Peter Maurice, Ltd., the largest music distributers in England, and his newest, Combined Opticians, Ltd.

"Perhaps it's because I do have so many businesses and consequently must spend so much of my time talking about them that I know how much a man can appreciate his wife's interest and help," said Mr. de Gooreynd.

Personnel Work for Women Offers Increasing Opportunity

Jeannette Berger to Supervise Course at Radcliffe.

THE enlargement of a new field for women—that of personnel work in industry, Government and social agencies—has been emphasized by the opening this month of a new training course in personnel administration at Radcliffe College. Miss Jeanette L. Berger, of Washington, recently resigned her post in the personnel section of the United States Employment Service to serve as supervisor of the course. Miss Edith G. Stedman, director of the Radcliffe Appointment Bureau, is director of the course.

Miss Berger, who will be in charge of field work, will hold special seminars and will arrange individual work with each student, planning courses and co-ordinating material.

New Field For Women.

"Personnel work is still a comparatively new field and one which offers a future for trained women," said Miss Berger just before taking over her new duties. "There is a steadily growing demand for trained persons in personnel work for both Federal and local government services, as well as for business firms, educational institutions, hospitals and other social agencies.

Miss Berger cited the records made by women personnel directors of several large industrial concerns also the services rendered by Miss Mary LaDame of the United States Department of Labor. Personnel work, she pointed out, required much more than ability to select, train and place employes. Problems of human efficiency are closely related to welfare," she said "and in some measure all successful organizations care for their staffs, maintain relations with the community and recruit their employes."

Miss Berger's Record.

Miss Berger's own preparation for the Radcliffe job, in addition to her experience in the U. S. Employment Service, includes three years work at the Radcliffe graduate school following graduation from the University of Rochester, and one year as research fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington, D. C.

The aim of the Radcliffe course is to provide students opportunities to gain an insight into the human problems involved, as well as a knowledge of methods and procedures in this work. Only six women were accepted for the one-year course. It is open to college graduates throughout the country who wish to prepare themselves for positions in personnel administration. All must have had sufficient experience to qualify them for the work. One fellowship of $1,000 has been awarded for 1937-38 to Miss Hannah Greeley of the University of Wisconsin.

Old Blue Dungarees, Straw Coats Stylish

You buy the dungarees in sailors' shops on the waterfront or in low-price apparel shops for men, and wear them on boardwalks at the smartest beach resorts.

Rough straw jackets go everywhere from the beach, where they're worn with slacks and Mexican sandals, to roof gardens, over cotton evening gowns.

★★★★ X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, JULY 12, 1937 13

Bob Burns Says:

Three scientists come down home onetime and they stopped at Uncle Fud's house. The first they noticed was Uncle Fud's stove was sittin' on four stumps about three feet high. Right away, they began to figger out the scientific reasons for having the stove mounted that way. The first scientist said it was because the heat would hit the ceiling and then come down, making an even temperature in the room. The second scientist figgered it was because the stove, being level with the window, would draw the fresh air in more evently. The third scientist said, "No gentlemen, you're wrong—he merely has the stove elevated so he can put green wood under it to dry out."

The argument proved so heated that they called Uncle Fud in and asked him why he had the stove elevated that way. Uncle Fud said, "Well, boys, to tell the truth, I had'ta put the stove up high that way because I was short of stove pipe!"

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

The entertainment and sports committee, District Federation of Federal Employe Unions, will give a moonlight excursion on the steamer, City of Washington, Thursday night. Dancing will feature the outing. Henry G. Nolda is chairman of the arrangements committee.

• • • •

The D. C. Credit Union League will go down the river tomorrow night aboard the steamer Potomac. There will be dancing.

• • • •

Arrangements have been completed by the Farm Credit Club with the Annapolis Roads Club for weekly outings, beginning tomorrow, and continuing each Tuesday for the remainder of the summer. Golf, beach games, swimming and fried chicken will be features.

• • • •

We learn that "a full moon is guaranteed for the yearly crusade down the river which the Farm Credit Club will sponsor on Wednesday evening, July 21." The announcement indicates soft drinks, dancing and beer as attractions.

• • • •

The District Department, A. F. G. E., will sponsor a beach party and dinner dance Saturday at the New Annapolis Roads Club. The features include the entire facilities of the club; bathing and locker, club towels, tennis and field sports, fried chicken and dancing.

• • • •

Will Power at 30 Below.

How the powerful will of a Minnesota citizen prevailed against the cruelties of the elements is reported in the F. C. A. Employes Bulletin: "Proving once more the old adage 'where there's a will, there's a way,' the Farm Credit Messenger of St. Paul, prints a story about a farmer who hitchhiked his way 20 miles in 30 degrees below zero weather last winter to the annual meeting of his production credit association at Moorhead, Minn."

Dozen Retired.

A dozen employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing were recently retired—one of these with 44 years service. They are Samuel S. Ludlum, 7 West Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, a siderographer, over 44 years' service; Samuel P. Abbott, 3024 Second street, South Arlington, Va., an engraved steel die finisher, over 40 years' service; Annie Beckmann, 916 North Carolina avenue northeast, assistant forewoman, over 36 years' service; Julius C. Staats, 217 Seventeenth street northeast, a plate printer, over 33 years' service; Herman P. Thiele, 1509 Hamlin street northeast, a plate printer, over 30 years' service; Mrs. Rachel L. Fletcher, 558 Twenty-third place, a packer, examiner, stitcher and strapper, over 28 years' service; Kate R. Wharton, 108 Quincy place northeast, an examiner, over 24 years' service; Robert W. Beckert, 3709 Eastern avenue northeast, a tableman, over 20 years' service; Frank Harper, Vienna, Va., a laborer, over 19 years' service; Mrs. Leonora Sayles, 2504 Sheridan road southeast, a tissue separator, over 18 years' service; Mrs. Fannie M. Peddicord, 1917 Forest Park, Baltimore, a balance clerk, over 34 years' service, and Ewen M. Lake, 612 Independence avenue southwest, a clerk, plumbing shop, over 12 years' service.

Carefree Park Visitors.

Discussing the number of visitors to the areas administered by the National Park Service and the sights currently to be seen, the service says: "Park superintendents report that money is being spent more liberally by visitors, and that the general temper of the people is more carefree than has been noted for years." This has the earmarks of a crack at the Republican years.

G.A.R. Ladies Observe 73d Birthday of Ft. Stevens Battle

Heat Stops G. A. R. Veterans Just as It Halted Early's Men

A heat wave was at least partly responsible for stopping Gen. Jubal A. Early's Confederate soldiers at the gates of the Capital, 73 years ago today.

Yesterday, it was the Boys in Blue who fell back before the blistering glare of a July sun. Heat and the advanced age of the few surviving soldiers of the G. A. R. in the Capital kept them at home while services commemorating their victory were held on the mounds that were once the ramparts of Fort Stevens.

The services were simple, conducted by the Ladies of the G. A. R. and presided over by Mrs. Bertha I. Cross, patriotic instructor for the Department of the Potomac. Miss Mary Porter Smith, president of the U. S. Grant Circle, placed a wreath on the boulder which marks the triumph of the Union—and the heat.

In the address of the afternoon Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries compared the plight of the country today with the period of unrest preceding the Civil War. "It's time to wonder just where we are going," he said.

The time is past when kidnaping is an everyday occurrence. The G-men stepped in and made it "a dangerous pastime to indulge in," he declared.

Now strikes, inspired by C. I. O., are spreading over the country, and again the time has come to "give the authorities the power to enforce the law," Gen. Fries concluded.

The invocation and benediction were delivered by Col. A. C. Oliver, chaplain of Walter Reed Hospital. The bugle call to assembly, preceding the massing of the colors, was sounded by Boy Scout Robert Finlay. Gerald Weller, a "king" Scout from Quebec, sounded taps.

Address Stitched Into Dress Helps Child Find Home

Children who travel without their mothers are no novelty at Union Station, but Mrs. Ellen Kell, of the Travelers Aid Society, sat up and blinked twice yesterday afternoon when a porter appeared at her door with 8-year-old Catherine Freeman in tow.

Catherine, very small for her age, had just hailed from South Carolina and chainstitched in dark blue on a big white patch across the front of her dress was her destination—1601 A street, Washington, D. C.

She told Mrs. Kell her mother had not come to meet her. She pointed to the letters her grandmother had chainstitched—and then turned so that Mrs. Kell could see the duplicate patch sewn across her shoulders.

Except for one thing, grandmother had done a fine job. She had failed to mention the section of the city in which the girl's mother lived.

U. S. Printer Speaks.

Advertising Club Opens New Center In Raleigh Hotel

A "beautiful new home" of three rooms in the Raleigh Hotel was announced by the Advertising Club of Washington yesterday for the use of members who wish to spend a little time in congenial surroundings.

All a member needs for admission is a key costing him 50 cents.

The clubrooms will be for the use of members and guests. Members may loan their keys to their wives, but to no other persons.

All guests must be registered.

The officers of the club "look forward to many notable gatherings," they said, in "an ideal setting for the exchange of professional ideals, a center for the exchange of thought, a rostrum where wit and wisdom may have full play."

FTC Building Dedication Rite Set for Today

Cornerstone to Be Placed by Roosevelt, Using Washington Trowel.

With the trowel Washington used when he laid the cornerstone of the Capitol in 1793, President Roosevelt at 5 p. m. today will lay the cornerstone of the Federal Trade Building, at Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues.

The structure is the last to be erected in the Federal Triangle, of which it forms the apex, and will be the new home of the Federal Trade Commission—now located in the Rochambeau Apartments on Connecticut avenue and in an old apartment on Eighteenth street.

Ayres to Preside.

W. A. Ayres, chairman of the commission, will preside at the ceremonies. The United States Marine Band will play for an hour preceding the cornerstone laying. The Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, will give the invocation and the Rev. ZeBarney Throne Phillips, chaplain of the Senate, the benediction. President Roosevelt will be the only speaker.

The building will be ready for occupancy by January 1, Ayers said. It will have seven stories and a basement and cover 40,000 square feet of ground area. It is being financed by a $3,665,000 allotment of the Public Works Administration.

Work Delayed.

As designed when first authorized, the building was to house the Federal Trade Commission, the Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Since 1931, however, the duties of the Federal Trade Commission have been so expanded that it will now fill the entire building.

Army Orders D. C. Channel Fund Held Up

Engineers Decide City Must Provide Its Share First.

Capital Must Provide $389,000 of $1,600,000 Project.

District Commissioners have been advised that the chief of Army Engineers, Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, has declined to allocate any funds for the Washington Channel waterfront program until the District puts up it's share of the $1,600,000 project.

Groups interested in the program, however, yesterday held little hope that the District will be able to advance its share of $389,000, in view of the recent request made by Commissioners to have Congress authorize an emergency loan from the Federal Treasury amounting to "several millions of dollars" to enable the District government to carry on pending the passage of the long-delayed tax bill.

Civic leaders had believed that the District's share of $389,000 would not have to be advanced before actual work on the project began. Under present regulations, the Army Engineers require that a city, county or State put up its share of a river or harbor improvement before the Federal Government advances any funds, but District leaders argue that the District is in a different category. They point out that Congress appropriates funds for both the Federal and District governments and that there would be no point in requiring the District to make the first cash outlay.

Under original plans, the District was to make its payment when the municipal structures were to be erected along the Washington Channel. This would be in about the third year of the eight-year program.

Army Engineers and Congress have appropriated $15,000 for the preparation of plans for the Channel waterfront improvements. The plans have been indorsed by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission.

Allotment of funds now is all that is necessary to start operations.

Maj. Jacobi Dies, World War Veteran

Maj. William Jacobi, who served in the Air Corps during the World War, died yesterday at his home, 4514 Connecticut avenue northwest, after a long illness. He was 53 years old.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow in the Fort Myer Chapel with burial in Arlington Memorial Cemetery.

Maj. Jacobi was a native of Washington. Following the war, he and his brother formed the patent law partnership of Jacobi & Jacobi with offices in the National Press Building.

Poundmaster Seeks Awnings After Two Dogs Die of Heat

Official Will Continue 'Begging' Until He Has Shade for Every Animal Brought There.

Yesterday's intense heat claimed the lives of two of the 65 dogs at the District Pound, making Poundmaster Frank B. Marks surer than ever that he is going to continue his "begging" for awnings—until he has shade for every animal coming there.

He has two awnings, waters the pound yard two or three times a day, and imposes a summer diet; but still has an occasional prostration.

"I need at least two more awnings, but there is nothing in the budget to cover them. It gets plenty hot in the pens, in spite of our efforts. We rarely have heat deaths, but some of the dogs suffer," he said.

Although there are several shade trees in front of the pound, there is none near the pens, where the temperature reaches the same intensity it does on Washington sidewalks.

Marks is the poundmaster who announced when he took his job last August, he intended to find homes for dogs, and not kill them. Since then he has been more than 75 per cent successful.

"I have had calls from many States and during the past week I placed one of my biggest orders, a mother dog and seven pups all to the same person," he said.

Due to the fact that many people consider summer the "mad dog season," the pound is now taking in around 15 dogs a day.

"Truth is," Marks says, "most of them are not mad at all. And another thing most people don't realize is that we take in as many dogs for biting in the winter as in the summer. Much of the summer business is due to scare."

Almost 27,000 dogs are now "licensed residents" of the District, and Marks estimated that there are "15,000 or more straying around without tags."

Havana Ship Sails After Strike Delay

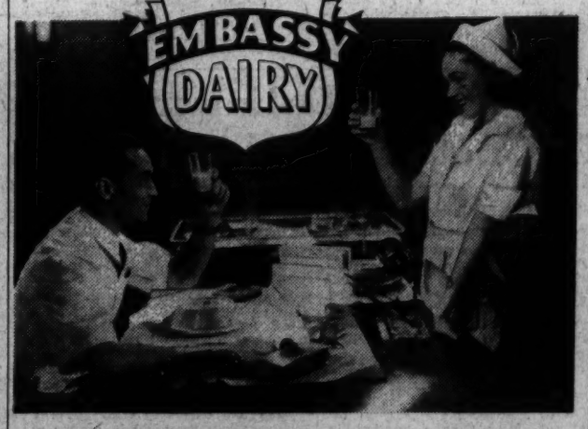

New Orleans, July 11 (U.P.).—Eighty-three passengers aboard the steamship Santa Marta were underway for Havana and Central America 24 hours late tonight due to a sit-down strike by the ship's crew.

Stewards demanded the United Fruit Co. grant an eight-hour day at sea and in port, and 70 cents an hour overtime. Deck and engineers' departments struck in sympathy wit the stewards.

Bond Racket Trial Due to Start Today

Cases of 9 to Be Tried Before 2 Judges in Upper Marlboro.

D. C. Motorists Declared Traffic Fines Were Not Recorded.

Trial of nine men indicted by a Prince Georges County grand jury last December, following a two-month investigation of an alleged bonding racket, is scheduled today at Upper Marlboro, Md.

The men, charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice and conspiracy to defraud, will be tried before Judges J. C. Mattingly and William M. Loker and will be defended by Attorneys Frank Hall, George Burroughs and Lansdale G. Sasscer, all of Upper Marlboro. Attorneys for the prosecution are States Attorneys Alan Bowie and Ogle Marbury, both of Laurel, Md.

The men who will face trial are Herbert J. Moffat, former justice of the peace at Hyattsville, Md.; Elmer Pumphrey, bondsman, Suitland; Warren Peake, Claude Reese, Albert Anderson, Howard Slater, Maurice Hampton and Arthur Bell, all former Prince Georges County policemen.

The men were indicted following an investigation instigated by the Keystone Automobile Club and the filing of affidavits by Washington motorists charging that motorists had been forced to pay traffic fines which were never recorded as being deposited in the county treasury.

Robinson Breaks World Half-Mile Mark; Cunningham Wins in Labor Games

Nats Defeated in First, 4 to 3; Tie Yankees in Second Game, 5 to 5

The Washington Post Sports

14 WASHINGTON: MONDAY, JULY 12, 1937 X ****

Glenn's Last Spurt Downs San Romani

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 11.—Clipping two-tenths of a second off the world record for a half-mile, Elroy Robinson, lanky Olympic Club star from San Francisco, today stole the show from an imposing array of national track and field champions at the second world labor athletic carnival on Randalls Island.

With Pittsburgh's long John Woodruff, conqueror of Robinson in the National A. A. U. meet a week ago, electing to stretch his lanky legs over the mile, Robinson went out and reeled off the 880 yards in 1:49.6. The time erased from the books the international mark of 1:49.8, established by another Californian, Ben Eastman, in the Princeton invitation meet June 16, 1934.

Victor Never Headed.

Robinson took the track at the start of the race and never was headed, although pushed all the way by Howard Borck, former Manhattan ace running of the Sixty-ninth Regiment Athletic Association of New York. The West Coast ace, second by 3 yards to Woodruff in the Nationals, passed the quarter-miles post 53.5 seconds, with Borck right at his heels.

Coming into the final lap, Borck stepped up the tempo and for a few yards threatened to pass Robinson. The Californian had something in reserve, however, and pulled away in the stretch to win by 5 yards. The blazing finish left such great performers as Abe Rosenkrantz, Michigan Normal College, and the Ohio State runners, Dick Squires and Charlie Beetham, trailing in third, fourth and fifth places, respectively.

Robinson's performance witnessed by a sweltering crowd of 10,000, was easily the high spot of the meet that saw six national champions come through in their specialties.

Torrid Mile Duel.

Two others bowed to rivals who finished second in the A. A. U. title event, and Woodruff failed in his first major title test as Glenn Cunningham again turned back Archie San Romani, of the Emporia, Kans., Teachers, in a torrid mile duel.

Cunningham's time of 4:44.4 failed by nearly five seconds to match his world record, but seldom have he and his fellow Kansans staged a more thrilling battle. Never separated by more than 2 or 3 yards from the time Woodruff strode to the front at the start, they came into the last lap almost shoulder to shoulder as the big Pittsburgh Negro dropped back steadily.

Glenn then waited until turning into the homestretch, 75 yards from the judges, to turn on the steam again. He quickly stepped past his rival to win by 5 yards.

San Romani was clocked in 4:12 in taking runner-up honors from Gene Venzke, veteran New York A. C. runner. Woodruff finished fourth, nearly 40 yards back of Cunningham in 4:18.

The other outstanding performance of the meet was turned in by Dave Albritton. The Ohio State Negro cleared the high-jump bar at 6 feet 8¼ inches, an inch and a half short of the world record, to repeat his national meet triumph over his teammate, Mel Walker, and Cornelius Johnson, of the Southern California Sportsmen's Association of Los Angeles.

White Sox, Browns Split Two Games

Chicago, July 11 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns split a double bill before 20,000 fans today, the Browns taking the first game, 4 to 1, and then dropping the nightcap, 4 to 3.

Good pitching featured the afternoon's activities. Jack Knott held the Sox to five hits to take the opener, the victors winning on a three-run first inning attack. The Browns collected 11 hits off the veteran Ted Lyons and Johnny Whitehead, with Lyons being charged with the loss.

In the nightcap, Monty Stratton won a pitching duel with Lou Koupal, each allowing seven safeties. The Browns bunched four in the sixth for all their runs, but otherwise they were unable to do much to Stratton's offerings.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 11.—Bob Feller allowed Detroit only two singles today, but he was lavish with bases on balls and Detroit beat Cleveland in the final game of their current series, 3 to 2.

In addition to the six passes Feller issued he let one Tiger run in on a wild pitch. Home runs by Solters and Trosky accounted for Cleveland's scores. Boots Poffenberger, a Tiger rookie, went the full nine innings, but was little, if any more effective than Feller.

Umpire Brick Owen was hit on the chin by a foul tip in the third inning. The jolt coupled with Detroit's 90-degree temperature forced him from the game.

A walk to White in the fourth inning followed by Rogell's infield out and Greenberg's single produced Detroit's first run. In the sixth with one out, Feller walked White, Rogell and Gehringer and then fanned Hank Greenberg. Pitching to Walker, however, he let fly a wild pitch and White scored again. Feller then fanned Walker.

In the ninth Gehringer and Greenberg walked. Walker forced Greenberg at second, Gehringer going to third. Rudy York then forced Walker at second. An almost certain double play was in sight, but Lary lost his footing as Walker slid into second and Gehringer scored on the play.

Giants Take A Pair From The Dodgers

Scores Are 10-4, 5-1; Pull Up Within Game and Half of Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, July 11.—The New York Giants trampled their arch rivals, the Dodgers, in both ends of a double-header today, thereby pulling up to within a half game of the National League lead. The scores were 10 to 4 and 5 to 1.

The twin win, coming at the same time as the league-leading Chicago Cubs dropped a single game to Pittsburgh, all but wiped out the Giants deficit in second place.

Cliff Melton, although clubbed for 14 hits, went the route in the opener and had little trouble as his mates staked him to a four-run lead in as many innings, clubbed Van Mungo to cover, and wound up with two three-run innings, the seventh and ninth. The big noise in the attack came from Wally Berger, who doubled and drove in three runs, and Lou Chiozza, who had two doubles and a single.

Berger also set the pace in the nightcap with a homer in the sixth, which ended a scoreless pitching duel between Clyde Castleman and Fred Frankhouse. A four-run splurge in the eighth put the game on ice for the New Yorkers.

Chapman Banished From Game After Run-in With Umpire Quinn.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 11.—The Boston Red Sox twice defeated the Athletics today in a double-header enlivened by a near fight between Ben Chapman, Boston right fielder, and Umpire John Quinn.

Chapman, angered by Quinn calling him out on an attempted delayed steal, threw a ball from the outfield a few minutes later, apparently aiming at Quinn. The ball bounced into the grandstand.

Meanwhile the Sox, having handed the A's a 9-to-4 defeat in the first game, were trouncing them again, 8 to 2. Archie McKain held the Macks to seven hits in the nightcap and Ed Smith, after a good performance for six innings, weakened to allow two runs in the seventh and was knocked out by a four-run barrage in the eighth.

The first game saw Jimmy Foxx and Buster Mills hit homers to lead an 11-hit attack against three Philadelphia hurlers while Jack Wilson pitched strongly with men on bases.

'T.T.' Race Holds Fan Interest At Motorcycle Meet Near Here

No one seems to know exactly why it is called a Tourist Trophy race, but that is what the boys of the National Capital Motorcycle Club were having at the Marlow Farms near here yesterday.

A T. T. race, as the enthusiasts familiarly call it, is run over an egg-shaped course. At the small end of the egg is a very sharp turn, which, often as not, sends pilots of the biwheeled vehicles slithering on their faces. Near the large end of the egg is a steep hill, apparently put there for the express purpose of slithering such faces as may get past the sharp turn without mishap.

The entire course is rocky, bumpy and as full of ruts as a bookkeeping career. All in all, the whole purpose seems to be to make everything as uncomfortably dangerous as possible for the riders, who might be having a swell time just gliding along over paved roads, if it weren't for such things as T. T. races.

In a Tourist Trophy race first comes the qualifying for post positions. This is done in four-man teams ripping off four laps. Four laps are equal to about one-half mile, and yesterday Bobby McKeever, who was destined to become the grand winner, won the No. 1 post position by jumping over the distance in 34 2-5 seconds.

Then come six four-lap heats. The winners of these heats go into the semifinals of 10 laps and those who come through the semifinals finally wind up battling it out in the final heat.

All-in-all, the whole business somewhat resembles an outboard motorboat regatta held on land, with about the same chance to injury. Yesterday Raymond McMahon cracked up on the sharp turn and was rushed to Silver Spring. An examination disclosed only slight injuries.

Fette Bests Johnson in 13-Inning Mound Duel to Win Second.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 11.—Rookie Lou Fette today bested the veteran Sylvester Johnson in a 13-inning pitching duel as the Boston Bees squeezed out a 1-to-0 victory in the second game of a double-header.

In the opener, the Phillies pounded two Bees' hurlers for 16 hits to win, 10 to 4.

The 36-year-old Philadelphia right-hander, who has won only two games this season, set the home club down with four hits, two of which came in the thirteenth inning.

Tony Cuccinello opened that frame with a double off the leftfield fence. Gene Moore walked and Eddie Mayo sacrificed both runners along. Fletcher worked Johnson for a pass, to fill the bases.

Stone Saves Team From Defeat in 2d

DeShong Loses 5-4 Lead in Ninth Inning as Rolfe, Dickey and Gehrig Hit Safely; Nat's Late Rally in First Game Proves Futile.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Yankee Stadium, New York, July 11.—The big bat of Lou Gehrig was protruded between the Nats and victory today and in the same thrill-packed ninth inning of the second game of a double-header, the fielding prowess of Johnny Stone doused Yankee hopes of a clean sweep of the four-game series.

That second game ended in a 5-to-5 tie after the Yankees had snatched the opening battle away from the Nats and Monte Weaver, 4 to 3, in the eighth inning.

Jimmy DeShong was holding a 5-to-4 lead as he entered that ninth inning of the second game and struck out Frankie Crosetti to bring himself nearer a triumph, but when Red Rolfe dropped a cheap two-bagger into short centerfield the Yankees had the tying run on base. Joe DiMaggio moved Rolfe to third with a long-distance fly to center for the second out and then along came Gehrig.

Gets Vicious Single.

DeShong worked the count to three balls and two strikes against the Yankee slugger as the 24,827 fans in the park pleaded for a hit that would tie the score. And then after fouling off three pitches, Gehrig gave 'em that hit—a vicious line drive to right-center that cleared the low fence on the first hop and evolved as an automatic two-bagger.

Rolfe trotted home with the tying run and DeShong heaved his glove in the air in high disgust. Manager Harris then called Syd Cohen in to pitch to the left-handed Bill Dickey.

The mob in the stands who had been pleading for a tie a moment before was now entreating Dickey to win the ball game with a hit. And as Dickey caught Cohen's first pitch squarely on the business end of his bat and a line drive rocketed toward left centerfield seemingly far out of the reach of Stone or Almada, the ball game apparently belonged to the Yankees.

Gets It Somehow.

But somehow, the fleet Stone moved over there into the path of the ball. With a final, desperate lunge and a one-handed clutch, Stone somersaulted into the ground. He came up with a mouthful of sod and Dickey's drive, and even the hostile 24,827 fans stood up and cheered the catch that robbed the Yankees of the ball game.

The Nats appeared on their way to victory when Pitcher Johnny Murphy wasted a 2-0 lead by walking four men in the fifth inning when the Nats scored four runs on two hits to go in front, 4-2. Lewis and Travis both singled with the bases full to drive the runs home.

Frank Makosky stopped that rally and the Yanks reached DeShong for two runs in the sixth to tie the score. Powell drew a walk, Lazzeri drove him home with a double against the leftfield wall, and Makosky scored Lazzeri with a single to left.

Things Happen.

The Nats went into a 5-4 lead against Makosky in the eighth when Travis, Myer and Sington singled in succession and those were the figures when things began to happen in that ninth inning.

That first game was a 2-0 affair in favor of the Yankees for seven innings. L. Vernon Gomez had something on the ball besides his fervent hopes. The Nats made two hits in the first inning and didn't get another hit off the spare-ribbed Yankee lefthander until one was out in the seventh.

Monte Weaver was doing very well—until the second inning. Then he ran into Lou Gehrig's fifteenth home run of the season, a towering fly that settled into the rightfield grandstand seats and the Yanks were in front 1-0.

Gomez Starts Rally.

They were in front 2-0 by the end of the third, because Lefty Gomez, of all people, started a rally with a single to center field. Frankie Crosetti pushed the pitcher around to third with a double that went into the right field seats on the bounce and Rolfe pushed Gomez home by grounding out to Travis.

After that, Weaver reformed and was pitching some tolerable baseball for a time but, we might add, so was Gomez. The Yankee left-hander pitched a pair of singles to Bluege and Kuhel in that first inning with one out, but whatever hopes the Nats had of scoring were promptly snuffed out by some stupid base running by Ossie Bluege, who pulled up at second base on Kuhel's blow and calmly stood a few feet off the bag while Crosetti took Henrich's throw from rightfield and tagged him out.

Thus reprieved Gomez settled down and threw five hitless innings at the Nats. Then, with one out in the seventh, little Johnny Mihalic socked the longest ball of his career, a triple over Jake Powell's head in left center. He languished on third as Hill popped up for the second out and was apparently stranded there when Millies' grounded to Lazzeri but, somehow, Lazzeri muffed the ball and Mihalic skipped home.

The Yankees got that run back from Weaver without delay. Bill Dickey, first up in the seventh, pumped a 380-foot home run into the rightfield seats and it was 3-1.

The Nats' hopes of beating Gomez were so low they could have walked erect under a daschund as the eighth inning began with Almada flying out. But then Ossie Bluege bashed a single into center, Kuhel followed suit and they had the tying runs on base. In this emergency Freddie Sington looped a short single into center, Bluege pulling up at third. But when DiMaggio muffed the ball, Bluege continued home, Kuhel went to third and Sington dashed to second on the error.

Edith Clark Wins District Singles Crown; Teams With Mrs. Robinson to Win Doubles

By Bob Garrison.

Four seeded players, the extent of the committee's pre-tournament ranking, performed in the final round of the District of Columbia Women's Singles and Doubles Championship yesterday at the Columbia Country Club, and when the day's racquet wielding was over, Edith Clarke was the new city singles champion and, with Mrs. Margaret Robinson, the retainer of the doubles crown.

Seeded No. 2 in the annual women's classic, the tall, dynamic Miss Clarke won in rather easy style the singles crown held last year by Mary Cootes, who did not defend it this year, by defeating Sara Moore, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—2.

On opposite sides of the net again in the doubles play, Miss Moore and Miss Clarke were involved in one of the best doubles matches in the year's weaker sex competition. Two lengthy sets were required before Miss Clarke and her partner, Mrs. Margaret Robinson, No. 1 seeded player of the tourney who was eliminated in a quarter-final singles upset, downed Miss Moore and Miss Frances Grimes, No. 3 player, from West Virginia, to successfully defend the title they won last year, 9—7, 10—8.

Possessor of a masculine forehand drive, Miss Clarke won without much difficulty from Sara Moore, defeating her for the second time this year in tournament play. Both times Miss Moore has bowed in straight sets, though most followers believe her to be playing her best tennis. Previous to this year, their matches have been three-set affairs.

Off to a three-game lead in the first set, Miss Clarke coasted in, holding leads of 4—1 and 5—2. Miss Moore, whose game was comparatively steady, even outplayed her speedy opponent on backhand exchanges, forcing Miss Clarke to resort to cross court placement smashes for points when she found that she could not penetrate her determined foe's defense by forcing her into errors.

Failure of Miss Moore to lob when she had Miss Clarke flat-footed at the net cost her several points and several others were lost when Edith passed her when she chose to play the net.

Particularly extended rallies marked the doubles match, and the stick-to-it-iveness of the winning team won for them in two sets when they rallied to win the second set after trailing, 8 to 7, and 1 point from defeat in the sixteenth game, with Miss Moore serving. Miss Clark played skillfully at the net to take two straight points at this time from Miss Grimes to break Miss Moore's service. They went on to win the next two games and capture the title.

They had failed to end the play earlier, when they led in games at 7-6, and twice in the fourteenth game were unable to get it when they were at set point, Miss Grimes finally holding her service by her own brilliant net volleying.

Mrs. Robinson, wife of Lieut. Stanley K. Robinson, finalist in the All-Army Tournament and semi-finalist in the District Men's Singles championship, played well, giving a display of forehand chop strokes and hard baseline drives, especially in the first set, when she repeatedly brought applause from the gallery with her well-placed shots, which often came to break up lengthy rallies.

Pirates Win Rubber Game, 3-2; Arky Vaughan Wrenches Knee

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 11.—The Pirates overcame rain and injury today to drop the Chicago Cubs, 3-2, in the rubber game of their three-day series.

Thunderstorms halted the contest in the fourth and seventh frames to delay the outcome nearly an hour and a half. Just before the second shower hit, Shortstop Arky Vaughan and Leftfielder John Dickshot of the Pirates collided under a fly ball and the star infielder was kept out of the remainder of the game. A physician said his right knee was wrenched badly.

The Waner act sent the Buccos away to a speedy start. Lloyd, who scored all three runs, tripled in the first inning and came home on Paul's single.

Again in the third Paul hit behind Lloyd, who had received a base on balls. "Little Poison" went to third and scored on a long liner by Vaughan. What proved to be the winning run was scored in the fifth with two out. Lloyd raced in with successive singles by Vaughan and Suhr.

Bill Swift went the route for the Pirates and yielded six hits. Demaree, Hartnett and Jurges gave the Cubs a run in the second stanza and Rip Collins collected his eleventh homer in the eighth.

Ellsworth Vines, GrouchoMarxLose

Beverly Hills, Calif., July 11 (AP). Charlie Chaplin and Fred Perry won the world's screwiest tennis match today, defeating Ellsworth Vines and Groucho Marx at exclusive Beverley Hills Tennis Club, 6—1, 9—7.

Scores of movieland's upper crust sat under a broiling sun for the match, formally opening the new club backed by the two famous professionals, Vines and Perry. The affair was a strange mixture of brilliant and awful tennis, but always hilarious.

Silverman Halts Rivals In 19-1 Rout

Allows 3 Hits, Mates Slam 19; DeVers Stars.

By Jack Munhall.

Gordon's Cafeteria stole a bit of the Yanks' thunder and also the spotlight in the National City League yesterday with an utter 19-to-1 rout of Heurich in the first game of a triple play-off for the A division unlimited first-half title.

At the same time, half championships were decided in the B section unlimited when New Deal defeated Rosss Jewelers, 8 to 2, behind effective flinging from De Vers, and in the midget league, where George Deoudes scuttled Police Boys Club No. 5, 12 to 1.

Slamming 19 base hits to all sectors of the South Ellipse before a large crowd, Gordon earned the chance to play Rose's, the third team involved in the playoff, next Sunday for the championship.

Joe Cristafil with a homer, triple and a single, and Larry Hanagan with a homer and a brace of singles led the merciless attack which administered Heurich its worst thumping in many a game.

In sharp contrast to the ineffectiveness of Lawson and the succeeding Beermen pitchers was the brilliant three-hit flinging of Willie Silverman, Gordon's slender righthander, who had trouble only with Huck Stahl, shortstop of the losers, who garnered two of the hits.

Another outstanding slab performance was that of Jake De Vers, who won his sixth consecutive victory for New Deal as it clinched the pennant. Young De Vers spaced 12 hits and was invincible in the clutch, while Walter Clubb, of the losers, allowed only one more hit, but New Deal hit when hits meant runs. Crawford homered for the winners and also added two singles for a perfect day at the plate, while Stadtler smashed a circuit blow for the Jewelers.

Deoudes won its title in an abbreviated four-inning clash aided by sensational two-hit hurling by Buddy O'Brien and the batting of J. Robertson and Batchelder, who made two hits apiece. Deoudes lashed out 12 hits, including a home run by Thirdbaseman J. Thrift and a double by Gusby.

Over in the A division unlimited Klein's Tavern, formerly the Mount Rainier Grays, continued simultaneously with its change of name to raise its standard of play and vaulted into the league lead of the second half, winning from Anacostia Motors, 9-8.

A two-run rally in the ninth put the victors ahead, 9-6, but they were forced to turn on the heat in the second half of the ninth to halt the losers after they had also scored a pair of tallies. Ed Luckett was the batting hero, driving four hits in five trips, while Shipp, for Klein's, and Miller, for Anacostia, hit homers.

In other games in the A section, Read's Pharmacy and Star Radio tied for second position, defeating H. B. Leary, 7-4, and D. C. Plumbers, 8-6, respectively.

Read used a trio of pitchers in Wes Taylor, Perry and Stockwell, who doled the losers five hits and also figured heavily in the attack and defense. Taylor, besides his pitching duties, connected for three singles, while Stockwell fanned seven men and handled 14 chances, including nine assists from the mound and at first base.

Clinton and Hebrew, who formerly played together at Eastern, shone at third and second by their spectacular fielding and hitting. The former accepted successfully 14 chances, while the latter started two of four double plays which lifted Taylor from numerous danger zones, and both smacked round-trippers.

Police Boys Club No. 4 juniors rushed over four runs in the last inning to best J. C. Flood, 12-11, in a free-swinging affair. Dewey Poole, former Central mound ace, delivered the telling blow, a pinch single which accounted for the tying and winning tallies. Jimmy De Chard was the victorious pitcher.

Sub-Par Round Marks Rippy as Muny Choice

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Claude Rippy, the city's comedalist and national public links finalist in 1936, who defends his local title the next two days over the East Potomac course, showed the pay-as-you-play competitors what to expect yesterday as he played the downtown layout in 68 strokes, one under perfect figures.

Rippy, who has been playing little golf this year, brought out his tournament game a day in advance, playing the nines in 34 strokes each and two strokes better than Harold Bower's 70, the next best practice score reported.

Andy Oliveri and Bobby Burton will accompany the slim city titleholder on his twin 18-hole rounds today, at 10:20 and 2:20. Eighty-one other entrants will also play 36 holes today and again tomorrow. The low four will qualify for the Harding Cup team.

Ted Rutley and Marvin Johnston tied for the blind bogey award at Kenwood yesterday, Rutley shooting 77 with a four handicap for a net 73 and Johnston, 93-20, 73. A. E. Eberson was third with 89-14, 75.

Howard Nordlinger won at Woodmont again yesterday. This time it was a sweepstakes event and his net of 71, fashioned from a 75-4, was two strokes ahead of Fulton Brylawski with 82-9, 73.

The winning foursome in Indian Spring's goofy tournament yesterday, in which the clubs were taken on a graduated scale, was composed of Harry Bachman, Jack Lynch, Perry Hoover and S. Zirkin.

J. M. Palmer holed his second shot on the 337-yard first hole at Beaver Dam yesterday for an eagle deuce and although Frank Cramer also holed a shot from the same distance, his was only good for a birdie as his drive was trapped and he was just out in two shots.

Two more flights were completed in Anacostia's open tournament yesterday, Al Scheider beating Ray Ball on the final green in the third flight windup, while R. J. Marks trounced Paul Knight, 1 up, in the sixth flight finals.

The Shawnee Open, at Jimmy Thomson's home course, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., will attract a handful of Washington professionals, starting today with an 18-hole round, another carded tomorrow, and 36 holes on Wednesday.

Roland MacKenzie, Congressional's pro who tied Ralph Guldahl for second in the event big Ed Dudley won last year, leads the local delegation that includes Wiffy Cox, Cliff Spencer and Leo Walper.

Bobby Brownell, Maryland junior champion, seeks another State title today in the Maryland State Junior open event, carded at Rolling Road over the 18-hole route. Several other local golfers will compete.

Bill Pendegast won the driving contest and R. K. Aten the pitching and putting at the Capitol Club yesterday. In a morning match Frank White continued his low scoring pace by shooting a 72, and pairing with Pendegast to defeat George Malloy and Snooks Houghton, 2 and 1.

Reds Capture A Pair From Cards, 6-0, 7-0

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 11.—The Cincinnati Reds bowled over five Cardinal pitchers for 29 hits today, while two of their hurlers were doing a good shutout job and giving up 15 safeties, enabling the Reds to take both games of a double-header, 7 to 0 and 6 to 0.

For three innings in the first game it appeared that Ray Davis and Jess Haines would hook up in a pitcher's battle, but the Reds jumped on the 43-year-old veteran for two runs in the fourth and one more tally in the fifth. They continued their assault for three more runs off Si Johnson and Jim Winford.

The wins raised the Reds' wins against the Cards this season to four, while the Cards have won seven.

Steele Feared Eating Way Into Heavyweight

Here we see the culprits—Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele, who will fight Hobo Williams at Griffith Stadium July 20, and Jordan Fenwick, his chef, commonly known as "Butch." "Butch" is increasing Freddie's poundage by giving him a cup of beef broth after a hard workout.

By Bill McCormick

That hospitality, personified particularly in the cooking of "Butch," the genial colored chef at Steele's Griffith Farms training camp, is playing havoc with Freddie's waist line, ruining his morale by making him accustomed to fried chicken the likes of which he will never get in his native State of Washington and is absolutely demoralizing Dave Miller, manager of the 160-pound title holder.

In fact, all parties concerned have been registering complaints.

"This good cooking is giving me gray hairs," insists Miller, who for the past week has been trotting Freddie on the scales every day to record his poundage. "When we first began to realize Freddie was eating himself out of shape, we dug up a very accurate scales. What they showed was most astounding. Now we're trying to get Freddie back about 155, where he belongs. It's all a headache, and I'll be glad when we're back home—away from Southern hospitality and cooking."

Ray Arcel, the noted trainer to whom has fallen the task of moulding Fred into his finest fighting fettle, is another dissatisfied by the way things have been going.

"I thought I had a tough job whittling Charley (Phil) Rosenberg from 155 to 116 in three months," Ray admitted, modestly referring to the feat which brought him national recognition. "I did that and got a lot of publicity, but I never had a cook like this one to battle. I think the best way to get Freddie in shape is to shoot Butch, which might not be a bad idea at that."

Steele himself, still tempted by Butch's cooking, had another idea about the whole business.

"I'm liable to eat myself into the heavyweight division—and then I'd have to fight Joe Louis. Ain't that murder?"

Butch is the most dissatisfied party of all.

"Mah goodness," he complains, "Heah Ah goes an' prepares mah best food an' everybody kickin'. Ah think Ah'll have to get me anothuh job away from de fight racket aftuh Mistuh Steele finishes dis fight."

Homestead Grays Win, Lose to Giants

The Washington Elite Giants divided a double-header with the Homestead Grays yesterday at Griffith Stadium, taking the opener by a 3-2 score, and leading, 2-1, in the nightcap until the Grays came to life in the seventh and final inning and drove six runs across the plate.

Leesburg Edges Vienna, 3-1, in County League

Leesburg, Va., July 11.—The Leesburg baseball team, leaders in the Tri-County League, won their twelfth straight game this afternoon when they defeated Vienna, 3-1. The pitching of Talburtt, of the Leesburg team, and Taylor, for Vienna, featured the game. Chumbers, shortstop for Leesburg, played a good game. Downs' hitting was outstanding.

Grove to Be Honored By Cumberland Fans

Cumberland, Md., July 11.—When the Boston Red Sox of the American League play the American Legion club of Cumberland here tomorrow at 4 o'clock, baseball fans of Lonaconing will present Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove with a seal gladstone bag.

Grove, a native of Lonaconing, started his organized baseball career at Martinsburg in the Blue Ridge League. He will be seen in action on the mound during Monday's game.

Triple Play Ends Rally, Annapolis Wins, 3-1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

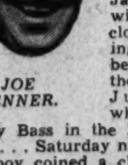

Annapolis, July 11.—With Annapolis leading, 3 to 1, and Eastport up in the ninth with three men on, a snappy triple play ended the game with the score unchanged. There was no scoring until the fifth, when Townsend doubled and cut across the plate on Wynne's single. Jewett homed in the eighth with one out and Myers doubled and scored on Johnson's single.

Heldman Wins Mid States Net Tourney

Philadelphia, July 11 (U.P.).—Julius Heldman, 17-year-old southpaw from the University of California at Los Angeles, won the Middle States men's grass court tennis title today by defeating Robert Harman, of the rival University of California, Berkeley. The scores were 6—3, 6—2, 1—6, 2—6, 6—2.

The U. C. L. A. star, who holds the national junior championship, played brilliantly to take the first two sets, but his Berkeley opponent rallied in the third and fourth stanzas to set him back.

Heldman's victory in the final and deciding set brought into play a volleying game and backhand that netted him 17 placements.

The two-hour match for the fifty-second annual Middle States title was played beneath a blazing sun on the green courts of the Germantown Cricket Club.

Birkofer Released by Brooklyn to Toledo

Brooklyn, July 11 (AP). — The Dodgers today sent Ralph Birkofer, portly lefthand pitcher, to the Toledo Mudhens of the American Association, in exchange for Shortstop Lindsey Brown and an unannounced sum in cash.

Birkofer was obtained by the Dodgers last year from the Pittsburgh Pirates in a trade in which Pitcher Dutch Brandt went to the Bucs. Birkofer had been with Pittsburgh four years.

Brown, who comes to Brooklyn in the deal with Toledo, had been with Scranton of the New York-Penn League on option. He was with Beaumont of the Texas League last year. The Dodgers plan to farm him out.

$2,500 Prize Up as Shute Meets Cotton

By the Associated Press.

London, July 11.—Denny Shute and Henry Cotton, probably the two most solemn golfers in the game, start a 72-hole match for a prize of $2,500 tomorrow over the rolling Walton Heath course near London.

Britain, a little hoarse from hallooing Cotton's miraculous victory in the British Open at Carnoustie, already has favored its champion by at least 10,000 words. But Shute, whose record is noticeably barren, may be a little stubborn when it comes to the $2,500. Since arriving in Britain Denny has picked up nothing but a bad cold and a little sea air.

Denny and Gene Sarazen were tied by Charles A. Whitcombe and David (Dai) Rees in the Ryder Cup foursomes, then the Winchester, Mass., pro personally squandered a three-hole lead on the last nine to be tied by Sam King in the singles. Then at Carnoustie he shriveled in the final day's rain and finished fourteenth, 12 strokes behind Cotton.

The match, which will be played with 36 holes tomorrow and another 36 Tuesday, is a winner-take-all affair, with the money being put up by a London newspaper. Originally the paper offered it to John (Mysterious) Montague, who refused the match and eventually found he had more pressing business in the United States tomorrow any way.

The United States P. G. A. was asked to pick an opponent for Cotton, and chose Shute, who has just won his second straight P. G. A. title. Shute has had trouble with wayward drives ever since he landed in England, but his iron play and putting has been the best of his life. If he manages to keep his drives in Walton Heath's fairways, Cotton may have to absorb more than he can take.

The fact that may decide the match is that Denny can make good use of the money, whereas Cotton is likely to get whatever he wants, with or without the $2,500.

Both of them attracted large crowds at Walton Heath when they appeared today for practice rounds. And with admittance free to all British Golf Club members, it is thought close to 10,000 will be there when the match starts at 10:45 (4:45 Eastern Standard) tomorrow morning.

Hazel Bishopp In Tourney Debut Today

Hazel (Jimmy) Bishopp, the tall Takoma Park brunette, whose excellent form and steady stroking last year carried her into the semifinals of the girls' singles tournament conducted by the Department of Playgrounds, gets her first taste of action in the current tourney today in the feature second-round match.

Miss Bishopp, who is given an excellent chance of winning the title vacated by Willie O'Steen, of Virginia Avenue, won her first scheduled match by forfeit. Today she plays Annette Grolman, of Park View, on the Takoma Park Playground court.

At Rosedale, Lucille McDowell, for several years a leading playground player, who lost to Miss O'Steen in the finals a year ago, faces Peggy Stout, of Potomac Avenue, in another interesting engagement. The top match at Chevy Chase pairs Viola Collins, a promising newcomer from Georgetown, and Valerie Loomis, of Chevy Chase, a veteran of playground net play.

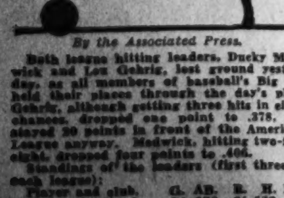

Anna Leigus, of Georgetown, and Eileen Lennon, of Montrose, a quarter-finalist last summer, also meet at Chevy Chase, while the tilt between Rita Levy, of New York Avenue, and Margaret Gray, of Twin Oaks, tops the list on the Twin Oaks courts.

At Chevy Chase—9:30, Betty Jacobs (Montrose), vs. Joan Beadle (Chevy Chase); 10:30, Valerie Loomis (Chevy Chase), vs. Viola Collins (Georgetown); Helen Gordon (Hearst), vs. Molly Thompson (Chevy Chase); Dorothy Barclay (Montrose), vs. Helen Miller (Chevy Chase); Shirley Combs (Happy Hollow), vs. Catherine Hickey (Janney); 2, Anna Leigus (Georgetown), vs. Eileen Lennon (Montrose).

At Rosedale—9:30, Jean Silverman (Potomac Avenue), vs. Frances Staver (Burroughs); Ida Burns (Potomac Avenue), vs. Katherine Keese (Hoover); 10:30, Ethel Fuller (Sherwood), vs. Elizabeth Owens (Hoover); Erma Dean (Garfield), vs. Rita Essex (Rosedale); 5, Lucille McDowell (Burroughs), vs. Peggy Strout (Potomac Avenue).

At Takoma Park—9:30, Hazel Bishopp (Takoma Park), vs. Annette Grolman (Park View); Irma Williard (Takoma Park), vs. Louise Melpolder (Bancroft); Jean Davis (Takoma Park), vs. Bertha Harnell (New York Avenue).

At Twin Oaks—9:30, Rita Levy (New York Avenue), vs. Margaret Gray (Twin Oaks); Marie Forti (New York Avenue), vs. Eleanor Yoder (Raymond); 10:30, Willie Lake (Twin Oaks), vs. Elaine Hart (Raymond).

By the Associated Press.

Both league hitting leaders, Ducky Medwick and Lou Gehrig, lost ground yesterday, as all members of baseball's Big Six held their places through the day's play. Gehrig, although getting three hits in eight chances, dropped one point to .378, but stayed 20 points in front of the American League anyway. Medwick, hitting two-for-eight, dropped four points to .406.

Standings of the leaders (first three in each league):

Dear Al: Selections at Delaware Park.

The death of Cy Cummings, general manager of Laurel Race Track, is likely to raise an issue that has caused considerable discussion in the past. Jervis Spencer, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, has always held the heads of the State race tracks should be Marylanders and he feels the same way about the matter now that a successor must be named at Laurel. Controlling interest in Laurel is held by the Butler estate in New York and several times in the past they have petitioned to be allowed to appoint someone outside of Maryand. At one time they wanted to put Matt Winn, general manager at Churchill Downs, in Kentucky, in as president of Laurel, but the commission refused to approve the request. "I think the men responsible for racing in Maryland should live here. That has been my policy in the past and I can see no reason for changing it now," said Spencer. See you at Charles Town on Wednesday.

BILL.

First race—Handcuff seems the best suited of the maiden 2-year-old fillies scheduled to compete in this event. Needs only to run back to trials. Gravilla and Fair Company appear ready to wage a battle for the place award.

Second race—Hi Blaze is a well-bred colt and has plenty of speed. The right ride probably would put this one over. Depend and Micro are the best of the others and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Third race—Brides Delight deserves a top ranking in this field. Napier will do the riding and I anticipate a winning effort. Sea Dove may improve on a hard, fast track. Sundad for the show end.

Fourth race—Cromarty, with Malley in the saddle, gets my call in this sprint. Sir Rose is consistent and dangerous. Miss Epe is cheap, but may improve with James to do the riding.

Fifth race—Nautch and Delfate should battle it out for the chief award in this field. Both are fit and ready, but the fact that Nautch will have a stronger rider, leads me to lean toward him. The Runner is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—Wild Turkey, Buck Langhorne and Chaucer is the way I prefer them in this field. Wild Turkey has seldom been in better shape and looms as the best thing of the day.

Seventh race—Luke Phantom and Flowery Lady are a tight fit in this field. Curb Bit seems capable of disposing of the remainder of the group.

Eighth race—The Christmas entry of Miss Tiptoe and Departed seems to have a lock and key on this purse. Some Boy may be the sleeper of the field. Paralda is another with an outside chance.

Best bet—Wild Turkey.

Californians Dominate Net Play in East

Robert L. Riggs, Joe Hunt Clean Up With Davis Cup Squad Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 11.—In the few weeks between the departure of the United States Davis Cup team for Europe and the beginning of the Eastern turf-court tournament circuit, two young Californians have established themselves as probably the best tennis players remaining in America.

Since the end of May, Robert L. Riggs and Joseph Hunt have licked nearly everyone in sight. The chances are, unless a "dark horse" turns up in the big tournament season which opens at Spring Lake, N. J., Tuesday, they'll be leading candidates for Davis Cup places next year if any of the current team retire. The only rivals who even seem to have been playing in the same class with them are Walter Senior, of San Francisco, and Art Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla.

So far, Riggs has won the New England, Southern Amateur and National Clay Courts titles and two minor events, the Tri-State Tournament at Cincinnati and the Fox River Valley Tournament at Neenah, Wis. He trounced Senior in four sets in the New England event and whipped Hunt in both the Southern and clay courts finals. His other victims include Hendrix, Billy Talbert, young Cincinnati star; Jack McDiarmid, Don Leavens, Northwestern University player; Morey Lewis, of Kenyon College, and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg.

Hunt and Hendrix have broken even in two meetings, the former winning in the Southern Amateur and the Floridian taking a five-set decision in the final of the Triple A Tournament at St. Louis. Hunt also has decisively whipped Senior, whose greatest triumph came last week when he trounced Wilmer Allison in straight sets to take the Illinois State title.

Hendrix firmly established himself as the leading Southern player—while Bitsy Grant is away—when he trimmed Ernie Sutter, the intercollegiate champion, yesterday to take the mid-Dixie Tournament after beating Ramsay Potts in the semifinal.

Horseshoe Courts Will Open Tonight

Miss Sibyl Baker, supervisor of playgrounds, has completed plans for tonight's opening of the first lighted municipal horseshoe courts in Washington. There are six finely plotted courts in the group, adjoinginging the McMillan Playground at Second and Bryant streets northwest, and interest in horseshoe pitching is expected to boom here with the addition of these facilities.

To celebrate the opening of the McMillan courts, an invitation tournament including the leading players in Washington and vicinity, has been arrayed for tomorrow night. Play will start at 8 o'clock.

The list of players entered is headed by C. C. Henson, jr., of Arlington, Va., winner of the District metropolitan championship on several occasions. Harry Woodfield, Francis Battiste and Charles Heleker top the group of local players. Ed Henry, of Falls Church; Raymond Frye, of Orkney Springs, Va.; Joe Merryman, of Bladensburg, and Lee Fleshman, of Rogers Heights are the entrants from neighboring communities.

Dr. L. V. Howard Takes Post at U. of Maryland

To Head Department of Political Science in Autumn.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, today announced the appointment of Dr. L. V. Howard, of William and Mary College, to head the department of political science next fall.

An authority on international law and American diplomacy, Dr. Howard is head of the department of government at William and Mary. Previously, he served for nine years as associate professor and professor of government at William and Mary.

Dr. Howard was graduated with an A. B. degree from Birmingham-Southern College. He won his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees at the University of Chicago. He is a member of the American Association of University Professors and the American Political Science Association.

Dr. Pergler's Lectures.

Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of the National University Law School, Washington, will deliver a series of lectures on Balkan nations at the University of Maryland this week.

During the war, Dr. Pergler was actively engaged in the movement to free oppressed peoples under rule of Austria Hungary. He represented the Czechoslovaks at the Congress of Small Nations in Washington in 1917 and later served as diplomatic representative of Czechoslovakia in the United States.

The subjects of Dr. Pergler's addresses and the dates on which he will speak follow:

Today—Present-day Central Europe and its foundations.

Tomorrow—The Little Entente; origins, development and purpose.

Thursday—The new Balkans.

Luray High Principal Picked to Play Carillon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., July 11.—Prof. Charles T. Chapman, principal of the Luray High School, will be the permanent carillonneur at the Belle-Brown-Northcott carillon, now being constructed on the western outskirts of Luray. The carillon is being erected to the memory of Mrs. Belle Northcott, wife of Col. Theodore C. Northcott, owner of the Luray Caverns. Col. Northcott and his daughter, Mrs. Harry B. Graves, are bearing all the expense. The carillon will be donated to the town of Luray.

Delegates Are Chosen By Nanjemoy 4-H Club

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 11.—At the weekly meeting of the Girls 4-H Club of Nanjemoy, five members were selected to represent the club at the Boys and Girls Club week, to be held at College Park August 5-10.

They are Jean Stevenson, of Grayton; Emily Kent Linton, of Riverdale; Elizabeth Karlsson, Mildred Golden and Agnes Dyson, all of Ironsides.

On the Air Today

At last July 12 is here, and that means that the Columbia Broadcasting System will offer its first Shakespearean play, "Hamlet," with Burgess Meredith in the stellar role. At the same time John Barrymore will star in his third of the English bard's plays. Tonight he will play a dual role in "The Tempest," that of Caliban and Prospero. His wife, Elaine, also assumes a dual personality by performing as Ariel and Miranda.

It is possible to hear a little of each play, if you are so inclined. Columbia's offering will be broadcast by WJSV, from 7 to 8 p. m. Barrymore takes to the air over WMAL from 8:30-9:15 p. m. There are any number of combinations of minutes that can be evolved, so that one may listen to "Hamlet" for 45 minutes and then break into "The Tempest" at 8:45 p. m. and hear the remaining 30 minutes of the play. Or, you may listen to Meredith for half an hour and then at 8:30 p. m. tune in Barrymore. Then, there are those who absolutely will not listen to Meredith, but will wait for Barrymore, and many will listen to Meredith for the full hour and then catch the last 15 minutes of Barrymore.

The chances are, however, since Columbia will have the earlier airing, that the majority of people listening will not want to change their dials at 8:30, when Barrymore broadcasts, because they will have become so engrossed in the progress of the play that tuning it out will be difficult.

Assisting the Barrymores will be Walter Brennan, as Stephano; Herbert Mundin, as Trinculo; Robert Warwick, as Alonzo, and Henry Hunter as Ferdinand. The music is by Will Prior and the narration by Ken Carpenter.

With Meredith will be Walter Abel, as Horatio; Montague Love, as the King; Grace George, as the Queen; Margaret Perry, as Ophelia; Ben Webster, as Polonius; Morris Ankrum, as Laertes; John Wray, as the Gravedigger, and William Brady, as the Ghost. Conway Tearle has been signed to act as narrator for the entire series, and Victor Bay will direct the symphony orchestra which will provide music for the cycle of dramas.

Following close on the heels of both N. B. C. and C. B. S., the Mutual Broadcasting Co. announced yesterday to match the rival networks with a series of seven broadcasts of the famous classic "Les Miserables," with Orson Welles, of Broadway fame, in the star role of Jean Valjean. The first of the series is scheduled for July 23 and will be heard from 9 to 9:30 p. m.

If you are not in the mood for Shakespeare but would rather hear a thrilling detective story, WOL offers the "Tennis Court Murder," as dramatized by the "Thrilling Detective" cast. Baron von Ech, brilliant tennis star of Germany, after winning a tournament at the Westfield Tennis Club, was murdered before a crowd of 5,000 people. The program will be heard at 8 p. m.

"Who will go to Atlantic City from the Nation's Capital this year to compete in the national finals of the American beauty event September 6 for the title of Miss America of 1937?"

This year not only beauty will play an important part in the judging. Talent will rate 50-50 with beauty because the girl that wins the local contest will be offered more opportunities to cash in on her beauty and talent than ever before. The girls must register at the Timekeeper's office in the Trans-Lux Building. There complete details will be given.

Other features:

2:30 p. m.—WMAL. "Lets Talk It Over" will present Lina Cavalieri, opera singer; Countess Waldeck, lecturer and writer, and Oliver Whiting, commentator.

5:15 p. m.—WJSV. The broadcast from the scene of the celebration of the Northwest Territory.

7 p. m.—WRC. Gracie Allen will expose the business inside of the movie industry when Producer Smitherwitz negotiates for the screen rights to her play. "The Private Life of Mrs. Robin Hood."

8 p. m.—WRC. Fibber McGee and Molly, who have just finished their first talking picture, will return to the airways with Henry Busse's orchestra.

9 p. m.—WRC. Frank Black will feature "Love Me Tonight," by Rogers; Jerome Kern's "Make Believe;" "Rhythm of the Rumba" by Rainger, and "Czardas" from Victor Herbert's "Fortune Teller," on the "Contented Hour."

nesian words. The fliers, however, said there was no sign of life and they discounted the possibility the markings in the sand could have related to the lost plane.

Destroyers Speed Ahead.

Speeding ahead of the Lexington, the three destroyers planned to take up searching positions Tuesday morning to assist the Lexington.

Messages did not reveal whether the northward movement of the Colorado en route to the rendezvous meant return of the battleship here, deemed capable of sustaining her engines and planes only until Tuesday.

The Lexington reported her position 336 miles south of Honolulu late last night. Although capable of making 33 knots, nearly 38 miles an hour, she throttled down to 18 knots to conserve fuel.

Hagerstown Protests Withdrawal of Trains

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, July 11.—The Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce has sent a protest to the Interstate Commerce Commission on the withdrawal of two Pennsylvania Railroad passenger trains between Hagerstown and Harrisburg.

The chamber protest said that it was its belief that as a matter of public convenience that the trains should be continued for the benefit of the traveling public of this and neighboring States, and to serve the business interests of Hagerstown.

The removal of the train will leave Hagerstown, the protest states, with but one train for Harrisburg leaving at 6:45 a. m. and one train from Harrisburg, arriving here at 1:20 a. m. Both trains connect with fast trains for New York and Philadelphia.

Tobacco Growers Picnic Scheduled Wednesday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 11.—The Tobacco Growers picnic will be held Wednesday at Seaside Park, Calvert County.

Among special features will be prizes for the bearer and owner of the best sample of tobacco of the 1936 crop.

United States Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland; Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore; Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate, and Herbert R. O'Connor, attorney general of Maryland, will speak.

Eyewitnesses Accuse Japanese of Poaching

Nakeen, via Kanakanak, Alaska, July 11 (AP).—H. B. Friele, charman of the Association of Pacific Fisheries board, reported he and other salmon fishermen surprised Japanese fishing boats taking salmon off Alaska Wednesday.

Copies of evewitnesses affidavits are being sent Secretary Hull, accompanied by aerial photographs. Friele said Pilot Jack Elliott, skirting the southern shore of Bristol Bay, sighted four vessels, then dived to within 50 feet of the decks, frightening the Japanese. Tokyo has denied any Japanese fishermen have been licensed to take salmon in Alaskan waters.

Frederick Man Marks 49th Year With Firm

Frederick, Md., July 11 (AP).—One of Frederick County's cigarmakers in the days when that was a main industry here recently celebrated his forty-ninth year of employment with the same firm.

He is John Wilson, who was hired by the firm of Rice and Haller on June 23, 1888. Rice and Haller conducted a wholesale tobacco business here and manufactured cigars.

Protest Strike Film Ban.

St. Louis, July 11 (AP).—Members of the Gentral Trades and Labor Union here voted today to protest to local theater managers against the ban on a newsreel of the Chicago steel strike riot in which ten persons died. An estimated 250 unionists saw the film at a special showing today.

New Scottsboro Trials for Eight Starting Today

By the United Press.

Decatur, Ala., July 11.—Samuel Leibowitz, New York criminal attorney, tonight denied he planned any compromise in the 6-year-old Scottsboro cases whereby nine colored men charged with criminally attacking two white women, would be given short prison terms.

Leibowitz arrived today from New York to defend eight of the men who will be tried in Morgan Circuit Court.

"We have fought this thing through the courts for six years and we won't stop until the defendants are acquitted," Leibowitz said.

Clarence Norris, one of the nine defendants, will go on trial tomorrow. Charlie Weems will follow him and the trials of six others will continue at the rate of about two a week.

The ninth defendant, Heywood Patterson, is under a 75-year sentence imposed on him by the court in January, 1936.

All nine are accused of criminally attacking two white women aboard a freight train near Scottsboro, Ala., in March, 1931.

In three former trials all nine were convicted and sentenced to death but each time their convictions were reversed—twice by the United States Supreme Court and once by an Alabama trial judge.

Morgan County Solicitor Melvin Hutson, who will aid the prosecution, said Norris and Weems would be brought here from Birmingham tomorrow.

Woodmen Women To Meet Thursday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Deer Park, Md., July 11.—The Woodmen Circle of Deer Park will be host to the district convention here next Thursday. The honor guest will be Mrs. Rosa L. Canada, of Washington, national director and State manager of Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Miss Anna Thrasher, State assistant junior counselor and district past president, will have an important part on the program, as will Mrs. Nora Mosser, State musician and district auditor; Mrs. Rachel Walter, inner sentinel, and Mrs. Ruth Lohr, members of Deer Park Grove, No. 58.

The convention will begin at 1:30, when ritualistic work will be exemplified and new district officers elected and installed. A drive to Deep Creek Lake will be a diversion.

Virginia Boy, 11, Killed byLightning

Harrisonburg, Va., July 11 (AP).—Eleven-year-old Thurston Bradburn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Bradburn, was killed yesterday by a bolt of lightning while working in the garden of his home at Hinton, 5 miles west of here.

Thurston's brother, Randolph, 16, was knocked unconscious by the bolt. The father of the two boys, standing some distance away, saw them felled. There was no sign of a storm except one black cloud overhead.

Later another bolt started a fire which destroyed a barn belonging to David H. Liskey, 4 miles south of Harrisonburg.

Four horses and farm machinery were saved. The Rockingham County fire truck pumped water from a nearby creek to prevent the flames spreading to other buildings.

E. E. Loomis, Head Of Lehigh, Dies

Summit, N. J., July 11 (AP).—Edward Eugene Loomis, 72, chairman of the board of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, died today.

Death was attributed to hemiplegia—bursting of a cerebral blood vessel. At the bedside were his wife, Julia Olivia Langdon Loomis; his two daughters, Olivia and Mrs. Virginia Schieffelin, and a son-in-law, Bayard Schieffelin.

Island Pony Roundup Scheduled for July 29

Chincoteague, Va., July 11 (AP).—Chincoteague's pony penning will be held on the traditional last Thursday in July, in conjunction with the Chincoteague Firemen's Carnival, which continues throughout the week.

As a feature of the roundup of the ponies, the Chincoteague Coast Guard of the Sixth District will be host to other Coast Guard districts. During the afternoon there will be boat races, in which the Coast Guardsmen will compete. Other highlights scheduled for the day of the roundup will be swimming races, pony races, boxing matches and demonstrations by the Coast Guardsmen.

Fredericksburg Span Is Opened to Traffic

Fredericksburg, Va., July 11.—The Free Bridge, main connecting link between this city and the counties of Northern Neck, Va., was opened to one-way traffic at noon yesterday following the partial replacement of three spans of the bridge which were washed out in the disastrous spring flood.

J. H. Walker, Fredericksburg district engineer for the State highway department, said the bridge would be open to two-way traffic the latter part of next week.

Three spans of the bridge were washed out April 26 in the worst flood in the history of this section, which caused damage estimated at close to $1,000,000.

Car Door Blinds Girl.

St. Louis, Ill., July 11 (AP).—Struck in the face by the doorhandle of a speeding automobile, 3-year-old Flora Jean Burnett was permanently blinded today. Police held the driver of the car, which struck the child as her grandfather attempted to pull her back from its path.

7 Injured in Freak Accidents; Tractor Crushes Farm Worker

Truckman Pinned Under Runaway Vehicle; Couple Hurt When Car Upsets; Policeman Traffic Victim.

A series of freak accidents yesterday kept Washington hospital attendants busy. Although no one was killed, serious injuries were sustained by victims.

Earl Taylor, 17, of Alexandria, was in Emergency Hospital with a fractured pelvis. He was a passenger in a car which struck a taxicab stopping suddenly at Seventh and Pennsylvania avenue.

Clarence Bell, 25, of 225 Fiftieth street northeast, was in Gallinger Hospital badly crushed. He parked his truck on Division street northeast without pulling the brake tight. When the truck rolled downhill, he chased it. The vehicle ran up a bank, turned over on top of Bell.

George Revelle, 58, of Ardmore, Md., was brought to Emergency Hospital crushed by a tractor. He was working it on his farm near Ardmore when it turned over on top of him.

Anna Bonds, 27, and William Knoblocks, 1406 New Jersey avenue northwest, were brought to Gallinger Hospital, also cut and cruhed. Their automobile overturned on them after running off Ritchie road, near Capitol Heights, Md.

Private Charles T. Williams, 23, of the Metropolitan Police force, and Robert Seater, of 1403 Meridian place northwest, were in Georgetown Hospital, after a three-car collision on Connecticut avenue. Williams in a scout car, glanced his fender off that of Herbert J. Ojarpera when the latter made a turn, Williams' car, according to police, then hit a machine belonging to Richard Buckman, coming up Connecticut avenue. Seater was riding with Buckman. Williams and Seater's injuries were minor.

Kiwanis Camp Wins Approval From Virginia

Alexandria Project to Be Model for Whole State.

The State department of public welfare last week conducted an inspection of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club boy's camp and announced that every phase of the program meets with its approval.

The director, Travis Wilson, was requested to get in touch with the State organization after formulating standards of methods and procedure in camp operation, which will be suggested for use throughout Virginia.

This is the second year the camp has been approved by the State.

Road Contract Let.

The State highway department has awarded the contract for the improvement of the road on Patrick street from Franklin to Green street, and the improvement on Henry street between Princess and Montgomery, to D. W. Jackson, Inc., of Richmond, their bid of $35,492.64 being low.

Utility Advances Three Employes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 11.—Operating affairs in the Charlottesville area of the Virginia Public Service Co. after August 1 will be placed under the supervision of Thomas Richardson, as district manager, and Lionel Key, assistant district manager, according to an announcement by Frank H. Evans, division manager. Richardson succeeds Bernard J. Dorsey, who is to assume new and extended duties at Arlington, Va.

Richardson has been a resident of Charlottesville for 11 years. A native of Hot Springs, he became connected with an electric company at Clifton Forge in 1925. He rose rapidly, and in 1926 was made purchasing agent for the newly formed Virginia Public Service Co. Since 1932 he has been engaged in special work for the central division.

Key, the new assistant district manager, was born and reared in Charlottesville.

Dorsey will become district manager of Arlington County. During his residence here he has taken an active part in civic affairs, as a member of the local Kiwanis Club, the Elks and the Young Men's Business Club.

U. S. Arrests Seaman On Ship-Firing Charge

Boston, July 11 (U.P.).—Edward Brennan, a seaman aboard the freighter West Lashaway of the American-West African Line, was taken into custody by Federal authorities today for allegedly firing his ship as it steamed down Congo River in West Africa.

Brennan was put in irons after he started the fire with the ship's log and clearance papers, authorities said.

1,000 Unite to Fight Grasshopper Hordes

Clayton, N. Mex., July 11 (AP).—Amid scenes reminiscent of the old cattle roundups, 1,000 ranchers, businessmen and soldiers attacked grasshopper hordes over hundreds of square miles near here today.

Women operated chuck wagons and distributed coffee and food to white-shirted storekeepers, lanky cowboys in 10-gallon hats and khaki-clad National Guardsmen and CCC enrollees.

Father of D. C. Woman Is Dead in New York

Jacob P. Muller, father of Mrs. Walter Hinton, of Washington, died yesterday in a New York Hospital, the Associated Press reported.

Muller, 63, a resident of Queens, was a native of Germany and president of a New York advertising agency. Death was caused by a series of strokes that began two and a half years ago.

C. of C. to Sift Program Ideas For Arlington

Suggestions of Citizens Will Be Studied Tonight.

Suggestions regarding a program for the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce will be studied by the board of directors tonight in the board rooms at Clarendon.

Carol F. Winchester, business manager, stated he has received more than 75 replies to the questionnaire asking business and civic leaders to suggest objectives for the chamber.

The board will adopt five of the most outstanding suggestions.

Following the adoption of a program, a drive will start to enroll all business and professional leaders.

To Receive School Bids.

Bids will be received and opened by the Arlington County School Board Friday at 7:30 p. m. in the offices of Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, at the courthouse, for construction of the Highland Park and East Falls Church elementary school buildings.

The Highland Park School, a four-room structure, will be at North McKinley road and North Washington boulevard. East Falls Church School, also to be four rooms, will be on North Underwood street, between Lee highway and Twenty-fifth street.

Picnic Tomorrow.

The auxiliary of the Arlington Hospital Association will hold its annual picnic tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the home of Mrs. Harry Thomas, 920 North Jefferson street.

J. J. Foley Funeral To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for John J. Foley, 59, native of Washington, who died Saturday at his home, 59 Q street northeast, will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. in St. Martin's Church, North Capitol and T streets, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Foley was a member of Potomac Council, Knights of Columbus, and of the Holy Name Society of St. Martin's Church. He was manager of an A & P store at North Capitol and DeFrees streets until illness forced his retirement two years ago. During the war he served with the Army Engineer Corps.

He leaves a sister, Miss Nellie Foley, resident of Washington.

Stripless Tease For Broadway Begins Tonight

Burlesques, Without Even the Name, Seek License for Reopening.

By the United Press.

New York, July 11.—Broadway's forgotten ladies—the strip-tease dancers—were on their way back tonight, dressed up with plenty of clothes and a solemn promise they won't take them off in public.

Seven former burlesque producers, whose shows were closed two months ago after a morals crusade against "indecency" in the theater, announced they will apply for licenses to reopen tomorrow, with a "reformed burlesque."

The new shows, employing 300 former strip-tease queens, will have no strip-tease dances, no low-comedy gags and won't even bear the name "burlesque."

"It will be refined vaudeville," explained Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, authors and publishers, who organized the producers under a new "code."

There will be the same familiar faces, however, from the ladies of the ensemble to Messrs. Herbert and Morton Minsky, self-styled glorifiers of the American girl in the raw and two of the chief targets of the morals crusade which closed their showhouses last May.

The reformed burlesque—which will pass under the name of "variety revues"—was agreed upon after a conference of penitent burlesque managers and city officials.

Licenses will be granted tomorrow, the producers were assured, and the new shows, which are already in rehearsal, will go into operation tomorrow night.

Most of the girls, who lost their jobs when the cleanup wiped out all the burlesque houses in New York, indicated they were pleased with the new setup.

"Most of us liked a refined kind of show, but a girl's got to work," she said.

Miss Moss said one of the things that made the girls like the new setup was the fact that basic pay would be raised from $18 for a 72-hour week to $25 for four shows a day.

Buck explained the word "Burlesque" had been eliminated to remove "the ignominy into which it had been brought."
